CENSUS OF IRELAND FOR THE YEAR 1861.

TO HIS EXCELLENCY GEORGE WILLIAM FREDERICK, EARL OF CARLISLE, K.G.,
LORD LIEUTENANT GENERAL AND GENERAL GOVERNOR OF IRELAND.

REPORT ON AGES AND EDUCATION.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,

We, the Commissioners appointed under the 23rd and 24th Victoria, cap. 62, to take an account of the population of Ireland for the night of the 7th of April, 1861, had the honour of presenting on the 15th of July in that year, in accordance with the 10th section of the Act, "Enumeration Abstracts" showing by Provinces, Counties, Cities, Boroughs, and Towns, the number of Inhabitants, Families, and Houses, in 1841, 1851, and 1861, and the Religious Professions of the people in 1861. We now beg to submit to your Excellency our Report and Tables upon the Ages and Education of the People;—forming Part II. of the Census publications for the year 1861. To it are prefixed some short explanatory observations concerning those territorial divisions of Ireland according to which the several tables have been framed. That subject has been already reported upon in the Ordnance "Memoir of the City and North West Liberties of Londonderry," published in 1837;—subsequently by the Census Commissioners for 1841; and more recently in the memorandum of Sir Thomas Larcom "on the Territorial Divisions of Ireland," dated September 26, 1846, and prefixed to the volume of Parliamentary Papers, for the Session of 1847, entitled "Correspondence relating to the Measures adopted for the Relief of the Distress in Ireland." It is also treated in the Report accompanying the Townland Index, which was prepared by the Irish Registrar-General with reference to the Census of 1851. Although, therefore, the matter immediately in hand is not a novelty in the Irish Census publications, we have deemed it right to epitomize as much of it as our present purpose seemed to require; and more especially as the "parish" has now for the first time been adopted as the unit of territorial division in the formation of the general tables upon Ages and Education.

TERRITORIAL DIVISIONS.

The present territorial division of Ireland is into Provinces, Counties, Baronies, Parishes, and Townlands.

Provinces.

PROVINCES.—At the period of the English invasion, Ireland was divided into the five principalities or kingdoms of Leinster, Meath, Munster, Ulster, and Connaught. The ancient kingdom of Meath, comprising the modern counties of East and West Meath, came to be included in the province of Leinster shortly after the invasion, thus reducing the number of great divisions to four; three of which, Munster, Ulster, and Connaught, retain their ancient boundaries. Although the division into provinces no longer exists for any legal purpose, it has a full popular recognition, and is by no means so obsolete as are similar divisions, which have been superseded in other countries. There exist, also, to a certain extent, among the inhabitants of each province, distinctive types of character, speech, and customs, which, with other features of their respective natural, social, religious, and industrial, conditions, serve to mark off these principal divisions from each other with sufficient clearness. Having regard to this circumstance, and also to the fact that each province makes a convenient group of counties, the Census Commissioners since 1821 have summarized their returns by provinces, and we have adhered to the practice with a complete persuasion of its usefulness. The ecclesiastical division into provinces is adverted to in our Report upon Religions and Education.

Counties.

COUNTIES.—According as the English settlers obtained footing in Ireland, they divided the conquered territory into counties, after the English manner, for administrative and fiscal purposes; but this division was not extended to the entire island before its complete annexation to the British Crown. The first accurate survey and limitation of the Irish counties was at a much later period; and the last is the great work of the Ordnance Survey, carried on since the year 1825. Some counties are identical with ancient territorial divisions, and others are of purely English creation. Under the authority of Acts of Parliament, the counties of Cork and Tipperary have each been divided into two Ridings.

Baronies.

BARONIES were originally feudal and military jurisdictions, but came in course of time to be used for fiscal and administrative purposes only. They were generally adopted from ancient Irish divisions, and were multiples of smaller divisions, which, with the exception of the townland or Ballybetagh, have long fallen into disuse. Some of the baronies have also been divided into half baronies, under the provisions of certain Acts of Parliament.

Parishes.

PARISHES.—The parish, although an ecclesiastical division, was early adopted by the State, TERRITORIAL DIVISIONS.

as a circumscription for civil purposes, both in Great Britain and Ireland; and unless in the centres of population, the parish, more or less accurately defined, is the object of primary interest to its inhabitants, especially in religious and educational matters. It is for this reason, as is more fully explained in our Report upon Religions and Education, that we have chosen the parish as the unit of division for our general tables.

Changes of Boundaries.

It occasionally happens that the civil parish is not identical in boundary with the ecclesiastical, nor again the parish of the Established Church with that of the Roman Catholic. We, have, however, in the first instance, followed the boundaries as they appear upon the Ordnance maps, and it was according to the parishes so defined that the returns were made to us by the enumerators. But, as under the authority of the Acts of Parliament to which we shall presently refer, changes have been made in the boundaries of several parishes, and have now the force of law, although not yet published upon the revised maps, we have thought it right to adopt them in the formation of our tables.

Acts under which changes were made.

Keeping in mind the distinction between the civil parish as a constituent part of the county, and the ecclesiastical parish as a constituent part of the diocese, we had regard to such Acts of Parliament only as led to alterations in the parish boundary for all intents; omitting to notice those under the operation of which changes were effected for ecclesiastical purposes merely, or where the nature of the change might be doubtful.

The changes which have thus taken place are of three kinds—first, the creation of wholly new parishes, out of townlands detached from an adjacent parish or parishes; secondly, alterations in the size of parishes by the annexation or detachment of townlands; and thirdly, unions of parishes previously separate, or the severance of unions previously existing, whereby the ancient boundaries of the respective parishes composing such union, or of the parishes into which any union had been divided, have not been altered.

Changes of each class may be, and have been, from time to time effected under the provisions of the 7 & 8 Geo. IV., cap. 43; 8 & 9 Vic., cap. 54; and 11 & 12 Vic., cap. 41. It is not necessary to enter minutely into the conditions attached to the making of the changes referred to by these Acts of Parliament; but it may be proper to state briefly the substance of each Act, in so far as it concerns these inquiries. The 7 & 8 Geo. IV., cap. 43, came into operation on the 23rd of June, 1827, and was passed chiefly for the purpose, amongst others, of consolidating and amending the laws then in force in Ireland for the unions and divisions of parishes. The important sections, bearing upon the matter in hand, are the 2nd and 22nd. By the 2nd section power is given to the Lord Lieutenant in Council, with the advice of the Archbishop of the province, and the Bishop of the diocese, testified in the manner prescribed by the Act, "to divide old parishes, or to separate any parish or part of a parish heretofore united, in whatever manner such union may have been effected; and to unite parishes one to another, or any part of a parish to another parish or part of a parish, in perpetuity; and to erect such divided parishes, or united parishes, or parts of parishes, into new parishes, with all parochial rights." The 22nd section prescribes that all real unions and divisions to be made under the Act shall be enrolled in Chancery within six months from the date of making; and that all acts of the Lord Lieutenant in Council testifying such unions or divisions, shall be similarly enrolled, or otherwise to be of no effect.

The 8 & 9 Vic., cap. 54, and the 11 & 12 Vic., cap. 41, being both "Acts to Amend the Laws relating to Unions and Divisions of Parishes," modified the provisions of the Act of Geo. IV., cited above, in matters relating to the redistribution of patronage consequent upon those unions and divisions; and the principal effect of the Act 11 and 12 Vic., as regards our inquiries, is to annex a further condition to the legality of changes made under the 7 & 8 Geo. IV., cap. 43, by providing that plans of the proposed unions and divisions of parishes should be lodged in the Privy Council Office, and that notice of the same should be served upon the patrons of the several parishes, who should thereafter, have an opportunity of objecting to the proposed changes, and of being heard before the Privy Council, by their counsel or agents, in support of such objections.

The other Acts of Parliament, under which changes have been made in parish boundaries, are those specially known as the Boundary Acts, namely,—the 6 Geo. IV., cap, 99, the 17 Vic., cap. 17; the 20 & 21 Vic., cap. 45; and the 22 & 23 Vic., cap. 8. The general object of those Acts, as expressed by their titles, was to make provision for defining the boundaries of the various denominations of land in Ireland; and to that end the Surveyor-General was empowered to ascertain the boundaries of all those denominations, including parishes. It is not necessary to refer more particularly to the date or provisions of the first-named of those Acts (6 Geo. IV., cap. 99), because the three succeeding Acts, which are to be read as one, and form a complete code for their special purpose, provide for a revision and authentication of all changes effected under that Act. They also provide for a like revision and authentication of the divisions or unions effected under the 7 & 8 Geo. IV., cap. 43, and 11 & 12 Vic., cap. 41. The alterations so ascertained and settled acquire the force of law when approved by the Lord Lieutenant in Council, a copy of whose order, sanctioning the changes, must be published in the Dublin Gazette. Such publication constitutes the authority upon which we have acted in fixing the parish boundary for Census purposes.

Changes of Boundaries.

The course followed in respect of each class of alterations is the following:—First, new parishes created under the 7 & 8 Geo. IV., cap. 43; the 8 & 9 Vic., cap. 54; or the 11 & 12 Vic., cap. 41, have been adopted in our general Tables, whether noticed in the Ordnance Maps or not:—Secondly, where changes have taken place by the annexation or detachment of townlands, without any change in the denomination of the parishes so altered, such changes are not noticed, as they are only in course of revision under the Boundary Acts; but where such alterations have actually been made and ratified by the Lord Lieutenant in Council, we have adopted them in our Tables. And thirdly, as regards unions or divisions of Unions under the various Acts referred to, we have not thought it judicious to deviate from the Ordnance Maps, inasmuch as the ascertainment of the statistics of the Union, or of the Parishes into which it may have been divided, is an easy process for those particularly interested.

Townlands.

THE TOWNLAND is the smallest of Irish territorial divisions now existing; but as the Census by townlands will form a Part of our publications, we have no immediate concern with that subdivision in this Report.

In the general view of the territorial divisions of Ireland just presented, those only are noticed which are used for civil purposes; and of those again, such only—beginning with the Provinces—as are multiples of the smaller denominations, exclusive of the townland, which it is not usual to subdivide; but the ancient subdivision of which, as well as their historical character and value, have been learnedly and fully explained by Sir Thomas Larcom in the memorandum prefixed to the Volume of Parliamentary Papers, to which we have already adverted, and also in the Londonderry Memoir. The other territorial divisions used for civil purposes, and employed in our Tables, are Cities, certain Towns, Parliamentary Boroughs, and Counties of Towns. Dublin, Kilkenny, Cork, Limerick, and Waterford, take the rank of Cities. The Parliamentary Boroughs, or Towns which return Members to the House of Commons, have, in some instances, a margin of rural district within the boundary fixed by Act of Parliament, 2 Wm. IV., cap. 45. These Boroughs, including the five Cities, are thirty-three in number. Prior to the passing of the Municipal Reform Act, 3 & 4 Vic., cap. 109, there existed five jurisdictions, called "Counties of Cities," namely,—Dublin, Kilkenny, Cork, Waterford, and Limerick; and three "Counties of Towns," viz.: Galway, Drogheda, and Carrickfergus. Since the passing of that Act, two only of these jurisdictions, Galway and Carrickfergus, have been preserved, in consequence of their omission from the Act.

Cities, Boroughs, and Towns.

Rural and Civic Districts.

According to the practice of former Census Commissions, and for the purpose of distinguishing between Rural and Civic districts, all groups of houses containing not less than 2,000 inhabitants are accounted Civic Districts. For the reasons explained in the accompanying extract from the "Enumeration Abstracts," issued in July, 1861, we have defined a suburban district for the City of Dublin, containing a population of 50,485 persons:—"The "municipal and borough boundaries of the City of Dublin are, for a great portion of their "course, conterminous, and are in part defined by the Grand and Royal Canals and the "Circular Roads. The City has of late years spread extensively, especially upon the "southern side, beyond the municipal boundary; and a large proportion of the population, "whose daily occupations are within the City, live in the suburbs, which, in fact, by con"tinuance of houses, actually forms a portion of the City, in the popular although not in "the municipal or parliamentary sense of the word. In the Census of 1841 and 1851 this "outlying district of the City was enumerated as portions of the Baronies of Castleknock, "Coolock, Dublin, Uppercross, and Rathdown, in the County of Dublin. Upon the pre"sent occasion we have separated them from the county, and now present them as the "suburban district of the City."

Poor Law Unions.

The last civil division to which we shall for the present advert, is the Poor Law Union, the nature of which also, is explained in the valuable "Memorandum" already referred to. The population of each poor law union will be given in the Townland Census, and also in the Volume upon Vital Statistics.

We reserve for our Report upon Religions and Education a few introductory remarks upon the ecclesiastical divisions of Ireland.

Ages and Education by Parishes.

In choosing the parish as the unit of territorial division in our Tables of Ages and Education, we have been influenced by the wish to maintain as complete an uniformity as possible with the Tables of the Volume upon the Religions, Education, and Occupations of the people; for which latter volume the adoption of the parish as the territorial unit was suggested by the consideration already mentioned, that the interest of almost every man is attached to the concerns, civil and spiritual, of his own parish, before it diverges to those of the country at large. Apart, however, from this consideration, we have followed a well-known tendency of statistical observations to subdivide the field of view as far as circumstances will permit. Thus, in the Census Report for 1841, while the absolute enumeration of the people was presented by parishes, the Ages and Education were given by counties; in the Census for 1851, the area for these Tables was reduced from counties to baronies; and in the present Census it has undergone a further subdivision into parishes. In making those few alterations, we do not conceive that we have materially varied from the general scheme of the Census for 1841,—that great work which, framed upon the plan of the best works then extant, possessed in addition so many original excellencies as have rendered, and will continue to render it the model for similar publications.

Territorial Divisions.

We now proceed to analyse the Tables representing the Ages and Education of the people of Ireland, at the period for which the present Census was taken.

Age Tables.

Concerning Ages,—the information contained in the Tables comprises the number and sexes of the population under one year; and thenceforward, the number, ages, and sexes of the population in five-year periods, for provinces, counties, baronies, parishes, and towns. The number, ages by months, and sexes of the population under one year, with the number and sexes of the remaining population by single years, are given in Summaries for each of the Provinces. The General Summary for Ireland contains the like information.

Education Tables.

As regards Education—the Tables show, by provinces, counties, baronies, parishes, and towns, the number, ages, and sexes of the population, five years old and upwards, who could "read and write," "read only," or who could "neither read nor write," at the date of taking the Census. They further show, by counties and provinces, the ages, sexes, and education of the people, in the rural and civic districts respectively; towns having a population of 2,000 and upwards being taken, as in 1841 and 1851, to constitute the civic districts. They also exhibit the proportion per cent. of the total population under each five-year period, in each degree of instruction or in ignorance, in 1851 and 1861. They likewise show by counties, without reference to rural or civic districts, the proportion per cent. of the population, five years old and upwards, ignorant or instructed, by sexes, for the years 1841, 1851, and 1861, in the age periods used by the Census Commissioners for 1841. The number, ages, and education of the officers and men of the Army and Navy serving in Ireland are now for the first time included with those of the general population, and are also given apart in the Provincial Summaries. The shipping population in Irish ports has also formed a separate subject of investigation, and shall be reported on in another volume. The School Tables show by counties the number, sexes, and ages of persons attending schools and colleges in Ireland, during the week which ended the 13th of April, 1861; the like particulars as to pupils attending schools and colleges on the 17th of May in the same year, and the number of days upon which the several pupils on the rolls of 8,749 schools were in attendance during the year ended 31st March, 1861.

Population.

The population of Ireland upon the 6th of June, 1841, was 8,175,124; on the 30th of March, 1851, it amounted to 6,552,385; and on the 7th of April, 1861, to 5,798,967. The following figures exhibit the decrease in the population of Ireland since 1841:—

The comparative population of Ireland at the quinquennial age periods in 1841, 1851, and 1861, is given in the Table for provinces, counties, cities, and the more considerable towns, in the Appendix. The population of all Ireland under each age period having been reduced, as in 1851, to a basis of 100,000, the results arrived at show that it was proportionally greater in 1861 than in 1851, at the following ages:—

At the date of the compilation of the Irish Census Reports for 1851, the English returns for the same year were already published, and the Irish Commissioners were thus enabled to institute a comparison between the population of Great Britain, during the several age periods in 1851, and that of Ireland, during the like periods in 1841 and 1851. The English detailed Reports for 1861 not being as yet available, we are obliged to substitute for the Table embodying the comparison above stated, a Table not less interesting, perhaps, which exhibits the like comparison between the population of Ireland at the same age periods in 1841, and that in 1851 and 1861.

POPULATION AND AGES.

Population at certain age periods.

In 1851 the Irish Census Commissioners had to report a decrease in the proportion of the population under five years of age, not only as compared with those of the same age in the population of Great Britain at that period, but as compared with the Irish population at that age in 1841. That proportional diminution was then very properly ascribed to the influence of the famine years in restraining marriage, and consequently in diminishing the number of births in several preceding years. The returns for 1861 show an increase in the number of the population under five years; from which we are at liberty to infer that marriages in Ireland have, to a certain extent, resumed their ordinary course. In the period, however, between five and ten years, the population exhibits a large decrease; while in the next period—"ten and under fifteen,"—the rate of loss is still heavier, and may properly be referred to the same causes which, in 1851, accounted for the loss of the population under five years; since it was from that diminished population that a large portion of our people, now between ten and fifteen years, must have been drawn. The periods,—"fifteen and under twenty,"—and "thirty and under forty," have also diminished in population as compared with 1851. The proportion of the population between "twenty and thirty" shows an increase in 1861, which is based, of course, upon the comparatively large number of the class between fifteen and twenty, in 1851, from which it has been principally filled. From forty upwards all the ten-year periods show a proportionate increase.

The numbers of the population at the earlier age periods, in 1851 and 1861, reduced to a basis of 100,000, are the following:—

The rate of increase in the male and female population between the ages of 1 and 5 years was about equal; the former having increased 8·7 per cent., and the latter 8·9 per cent. Between the ages of 5 and 45 years the rate of decrease in the male population was 18·3 per cent., and in the female 18·6. From 45 upwards the male population increased 8·2 per cent., and the female 3·9 per cent.

The high proportion of persons stated in the returns to have been 100 years old and upwards in the year 1851, is not only maintained, but has been increased in the present Census. In 1851 the number of persons so returned in a population of 6,552,385 was 711, as against 319 among the 20,959,477 inhabitants of Great Britain. In the year 1861 the number of persons aged 100 years and upwards in Ireland was 765 in a population of 5,798,967; and the number of persons of the same class of ages in England and Wales, as we learn from the Registrar-General for England, was 201, in a population of 20,066,224. The numbers for Scotland are not at present known to us. Of the 765 individuals in Ireland 100 years old and upwards, 249 were males and 516 females; whereas in 1851 the males were 219, and the females 492. In 1851 the greatest age returned was 121 years; the most extreme age returned in 1861 was 120 years, two females having been stated to have attained that advanced longevity. As in the former Census, the number of females 100 years old and upwards largely exceeded that of the males, but not in the same proportion.

AGES AND SEXES.

The Table underneath, conformably with that given in 1851, exhibits the number, sex, and condition as to marriage and education, of persons 100 years old and upwards, upon the 7th of April, 1861:—

Proportion of sexes in 1851 and 1861.

In 1851 the proportion of females to 1,000 males, in the entire population of Ireland, was 1,054; in 1861 it was 1,044, showing a decrease of 10 in the 1,000, or 1 per cent. In 1861, the proportion of males under thirty years of age to females of the same class of ages, was, 1,000 males to 1,006 females—this having been also the proportion in 1851. The relative number of the sexes, "thirty years old and upwards," shows a decrease in the proportion of females, the rate being 1,000 males to 1,111 females; the proportion of the sexes at this latter age period in 1851 was 1,000 males to 1,146 females.

Proportion of Females to Males in 1841, 1851, and 1861.

Proportion of Females to Males in 1861.

The counties in which the total number of males exceeded that of the females in 1861, were:—

Kildare,	1,000 males to 858 females.
Wicklow,	1,000 ,, 966 ,,
Westmeath,	1,000 ,, 966 ,,
Roscommon,	1,000 ,, 970 ,,
King's,	1,000 ,, 978 ,,
Meath,	1,000 males to 978 females.
Cavan,	1,000 ,, 986 ,,
Longford,	1,000 ,, 989 ,,
Leitrim,	1,000 ,, 993 ,,

As in the corresponding volume of the Census publications for 1851, a Table is given on the following page showing the number and relative proportions of males and females under 30 years of age, and 30 years old and upwards, by which it will be seen that in the following counties the males exceeded the females, under thirty years of age, in 1861:—

Proportion of Sexes at particular ages in certain counties.

Kildare,	1,000 males to 825 females.
King's	1,000 ,, 934 ,,
Clare,	1,000 ,, 939 ,,
Cork, East Riding,	1,000 ,, 946 ,,
Roscommon,	1,000 ,, 947 ,,
Cork, West Riding,	1,000 ,, 953 ,,
Westmeath,	1,000 ,, 957 ,,
Wicklow,	1,000 ,, 958 ,,
Kerry,	1,000 ,, 960 ,,
Meath,	1,000 ,, 960 ,,
Tipperary, North Riding,	1,000 males to 964 females.
Longford,	1,000 ,, 974 ,,
Limerick,	1,000 ,, 975 ,,
Galway,	1,000 ,, 975 ,,
Tipperary, South Riding,	1,000 ,, 981 ,,
Cavan,	1,000 ,, 981 ,,
Queen's,	1,000 ,, 985 ,,
Sligo,	1,000 ,, 986 ,,
Leitrim,	1,000 ,, 987 ,,
Carlow,	1,000 ,, 996 ,,

In the County of Kilkenny, the males and females under thirty years of age were in equal proportions, and in Carlow and Louth nearly so. The large proportion of males to females in the County of Kildare was owing, doubtless, to the number of military quartered at the Curragh Camp.

Three of the provinces show an excess of males under thirty years of age,—Ulster being the only province in which the females under that age predominated in 1861. The proportions were:—

Munster,	1,000 males to 969 females.
Connaught,	1,000 ,, 982 ,,
Leinster,	1,000 males to 995 females.
Ulster,	1,000 ,, 1,055 ,,

The only counties in which there appeared an excess of males over females, "thirty years old and upwards," were:—

Kildare,	1,000 males to 915 females.
Wicklow,	1,000 ,, 963 ,,
Westmeath,	1,000 males to 983 females.
Cavan,	1,000 ,, 994 ,,

Causes of decrease in the population.

Although during the last ten years the causes which operated for the latter half of the preceding decade to diminish so greatly the population of Ireland, have not been in action to anything like the same extent, the continuous decrease in the number of the people must nevertheless be referred in a great measure to the circumstances arising from the famine period. Leaving out of account the decrease in the numbers of the people, occasioned by death, whether from actual destitution or pestilence, an emigration so vast as that by which Ireland was drained of the most reproductive part of its people, from 1845 to 1851, could not have failed to draw after it a continuing efflux of the population, even had the ten years which we have just traversed been far more prosperous than they have actually been. This may be affirmed with the greater certainty when the proverbial strength of family ties amongst the Irish people, and their apparently irresistible tendency to reunite at the earliest opportunity are taken into account. We have no means of estimating, with any approach to accuracy, the numbers of those who emigrated from Ireland during the ten years preceding the Census of 1851. Upon the 1st May, however, in that year, returns of persons emigrating from Irish ports were obtained for the first time, and have since then been regularly collected and published, in connexion with the Tables of Agricultural Statistics presented annually to Parliament by the Registrar-General for Ireland. From those Emigration Tables, a summary of which appears in the Agricultural Statistics for 1860, we learn that between the 1st May, 1851, and 31st December, 1860, the number of emigrants from Irish ports was 1,174,179, not quite a full fifth of the population in 1851, but considerably more than a full fifth of the population in 1861. And from the volumes of the English Emigration Commissioners we learn that of the 2,249,355 emigrants who sailed from ports of the United Kingdom, between the 31st of March, 1851, and the 8th April, 1861, as many as 1,230,986 were Irish,—and, as stated in our Enumeration Abstracts—presented to Parliament in July, 1861—"to this emigration may chiefly be attributed the decrease of the population, during a period when the country was remarkably free from any outbreak of famine, pestilence, or of the other social calamities which have occasionally retarded the growth of population in this and other countries. It must also be remembered that the effects of the disastrous period of famine and pestilence which commenced with the potato blight of 1846–47 had extended over the first few years of the decade upon which it is now our province to report; and that there were no less than 250,611 paupers in the Irish workhouses, and 47,019 persons in hospital, of whom 4,545 were not workhouse inmates at the time of taking the Census in 1851, while there were but 50,570 persons in the Irish workhouses the day before the recent Census was taken." The constant prospect of emigration may well be supposed to have acted in restraint of marriage, although in the absence of a system of marriage registration applicable to the whole population we can have no statistical proof of the fact.

Causes of decrease in Population. Emigration.

Illustrative Maps.

An illustrative map, showing by various degrees of shading, the comparative density of the population in the several counties, is annexed to the present Report, as to the corresponding Reports in 1841 and 1851.

Age-curves.

Diagrams of a like kind with those published by the Census Commissioners in 1841 and 1851, showing, by a series of curves, the numbers of the inhabitants of Ireland, actually living at every age, are also appended to this Report; and the remarks suggested, are identical with those by which similar diagrams were accompanied upon the two former occasions.

Education.

In dealing with the subject of education, our inquiries were necessarily directed to the ascertainment of the same leading facts as were brought out in the Census of 1851. These are—First, the state of elementary knowledge, as shown by the comparative numbers of those in the population who are wholly ignorant, who can read only, and who can read and write; Secondly, the numbers of the population actually receiving instruction, of whatever kind; and Thirdly, the quality of that instruction. To the discovery of those particulars the same methods were applied as in 1851; the absence or the degrees of elementary instruction being sought for in each family, by means of the "Education" column in "Form A;" the persons actually receiving instruction in schools and colleges being enumerated upon School Forms L,—L No. 2 and L No. 3—examples of which are given in the Appendix—and also to a considerable extent in the occupation column of the A Form. The quality of instruction was determined in a general way, through columns for that purpose in the School Forms already referred to. The results arrived at by these several methods are given in Tables corresponding generally with those which embodied the same kind of information in the Report for 1851, but classified in a different way.

"Form L" required a return of all the pupils attending school during the week ended 13th April, 1861; by means of the Form L No. 2 a return of the pupils attending 10,170 schools, on the 17th day of May, 1861, was obtained; and on Form L No. 3 was returned the number of days in each month the several pupils were in attendance during the year ended 31st March, 1861. The results afforded by these Returns have been used in the construction of Tables XIX., XX., and XXI., given at pages 33, 35, and 36, and of the corresponding County Tables, which they summarize.

School Forms.

The supplemental School Forms, L No. 2 and L No. 3, were issued in consequence of a communication addressed to us by the Commissioners of National Education in Ireland, to the effect that the Returns for the week ended April 13th, 1861, did not represent the true average attendance of pupils at the National Schools, as the Easter holidays had only just then terminated, and the pupils had not generally resumed attendance. Considering it right, under the circumstances, to afford not only to the schools in connexion with the National System of Education, but to all schools whatsoever, an opportunity of furnishing a Return, we distributed—with the sanction of the Government—and after due notice to the clergy of the various denominations and the heads of the several educational systems, these additional Forms.

Quality of instruction. Division into primary and superior.

As regards the quality of the instruction received by the youth of Ireland, in the various educational establishments of the country, the Commissioners in 1841 and 1851 adopted the division into Primary and Superior, assuming the instruction to be superior in any school which included in its course a foreign language, ancient or modern. The superiority ascribed to the instruction communicated in the latter was probably referred, not so much to the presence of a foreign language in the school course, as to the presumption thus raised, that the general instruction given in such schools was of a superior kind. While retaining, for the advantage of comparison, this general division of instruction into primary and superior, it appears to us that the principle by which it had hitherto been governed might with advantage be more fully explained. An inspection of those columns in the School Returns which state the nature of the studies, has enabled us to determine with sufficient accuracy, whether the circumstance of a foreign language being taught in the school was exceptional or systematic. In the former case the school was classed as "primary" and in the latter as "superior." In judging whether instruction in a foreign language was to be deemed occasional or regular, we took into account the general character of the instruction, the number of pupils learning the foreign language, and other attending circumstances. Thus where the school, from its connexion with the National Board or Church Education Society, should naturally be classed as primary, or where the number of pupils learning a foreign language bore no substantial proportion to the number of those whose instruction was limited to English (circumstances which were usually found to concur in the same school), such school was withdrawn from the class of superior, to which, under the general principle, if unexplained, it might have been supposed to be referred, and is ranked with the primary, to which by its ordinary teaching it may fairly be assigned. Such in all probability was the course followed by the Census Commissioners in 1841, and we are aware of its adoption in the Census of 1851.

Primary Schools in which foreign languages are taught.

Although we have thought it right thus to re-distribute, to a small extent, the educational institutions of Ireland, according to the classification already adopted, we deem it well at the same time to furnish a list of the schools in which, notwithstanding the elementary character of the general instruction given therein, a foreign language is also taught. We do not attach to the terms "primary" and "superior" any other than the conventional or technical meaning implied in the distinction between those schools in which a foreign language forms no part of the course, and those in which foreign languages are regularly taught. Those experienced in educational matters are convinced that the presence of a foreign language in a school course does not of itself confer any substantial superiority upon the school in which it is learned; but that, on the contrary, many schools from which such teaching is altogether absent are entitled to an intrinsically higher rank than that of many classed as superior, and may claim to be regarded as amongst the most valuable institutions in the country.

Classification of School Returns.

In the years 1841 and 1851 it was not considered advisable to analyze the quality of instruction in Ireland with greater minuteness than belonged to the classification to which we have just adverted; nor, perhaps, do the Census Returns alone furnish data sufficiently full and certain to make a less general division of the classes of instruction perfectly trustworthy. Various circumstances, however, have induced us to attempt something in the way of subdivision, which, although far from complete, is, we have reason to think, accurate, and may serve as an introduction to closer inquiry, and more satisfactory classification, at a future period. In making this attempt we have been influenced not only by the desire to draw from the statistics collected in our Returns all the results fairly deducible therefrom, but also by the fact that within the last ten years the subject of education has engaged a share of public interest in Ireland, not too large, indeed, for its admitted importance, but not equalled, perhaps, at any other period of our history.

Increase in number of schools since 1851.

In this country, where religious opinion is so sensitive, the existence of controversies, with respect to education—closely connected as are the subjects of education and religion—cannot be matter of surprise; nor, having regard to what has taken place in other countries, is it to be wondered at that the advocates of rival theories should establish schools in conformity with their respective views, and thus compete with each other, and with the State, for the education of the people. Since the last decennial period, the employment of examinations,—whether "competitive," as a test of superiority, or "qualifying," as a test of absolute fitness in candidates for admission to the public service,—has concurred with the rivalry of school-systems in bringing about a great increase, as well in the number as in the variety of schools in Ireland. Under those circumstances, the treatment of the subject of education in the most ample detail that our statistics afford will, we conceive, but respond to the legitimate anxiety of public opinion, and present figures which cannot fail to be of considerable value. Not being able to determine the quality of the instruction administered in any school from the information collected upon the Census Forms—which it might be hazardous to overburthen with too minute inquiries—we were obliged, in several instances, to call to our aid the known character of the school supplying the returns. Although in this way we might be said to have inverted the logical order of reasoning upon such a subject, and instead of estimating the character of the school by the quality of the instruction, to have inferred the quality of the instruction from the character of the school, we have taken care, nevertheless, so to strengthen our opinion, by recurring to public sources of information outside our own Returns, as to make our classification of studies and of schools sufficiently accurate for practical purposes.

Royal Commissions. [Maynooth College; Trinity College, Dublin; Endowed Schools, Ireland; Queen's University.]

Amongst the most remarkable evidences of great public interest in the subject of education, during the last decade, are the Reports of four Royal Commissions. The first was that appointed in 1853 to inquire into the condition of the College of Maynooth; the second was the Trinity College (Dublin) Commission; the third was the Endowed Schools (Ireland) Commission; and the fourth was the Commission of Inquiry into the Queen's University in Ireland. We have availed ourselves of the Report of the Endowed Schools Commission for the purpose of supplementing some of those deficiencies in our own Returns to which allusion has been made, and owing to which it might otherwise have been found difficult to mark off the various groups of schools and classes of instruction. That Report—founded upon a great body of evidence—included distinct Reports, furnished by the Assistant Commissioners, upon each one of 2,828 schools which they visited. Under the designation, "Endowed," as understood by the Commissioners, were included not only the class of schools popularly so called, but every institution having permanent support, however small, from money or from land, secured to it for educational purposes. In this way the inquiries of the Commissioners were extended so as to take in along with those schools which furnish the highest kind of instruction short of university teaching, nearly all the parochial schools in connexion with the Church Education Society; National schools to the number of 381; and schools of other kinds in numbers sufficient to afford specimens of their respective classes. By their Report we have been assisted in referring schools to the various categories in our Tables. The Reports of the Commissioners of National Education in Ireland, have also been consulted with advantage, and likewise those of the Church Education Society, for the year 1861. Nor has any other source of information touching the character of instruction in Ireland, which could be deemed sufficiently authentic, been neglected.

Classes of the population under Instruction.

The Tables which contain the results of the educational Returns have been framed with an express view to facility of comparison hereafter; and in so doing, material assistance has been derived from the statistics of several foreign countries, where the methodical character of instruction, the regular gradation of schools, and the well-organized systems of inspection, greatly conduce to accurate statistics, and in which the progress of each kind of instruction is so much more minutely noted than amongst ourselves. Combining, therefore, such of the features of foreign classification as appeared most convenient in themselves and most suitable to the condition of Ireland, we have divided that portion of the population actually under instruction into three classes:—The first comprises infants under 5 years of age; the second, persons of the usual school age, which in Ireland has been taken to be between 5 and 15 years; the third includes persons above that age. In classifying the instruction given, we should have been glad to adopt the universally received division into primary, intermediate, and superior, if, in Ireland, as in many foreign countries, that instruction was limited to the precise description of teaching which would seem to fall within the province of the respective classes of schools. Thus, if all the educational establishments professedly primary, afforded primary instruction merely, and if all the intermediate schools administered that instruction only which is directly preparatory for University or Collegiate studies, the sum of the scholars in each group would accurately represent the number under primary and intermediate instruction respectively. Many schools, however, usually considered primary afford instruction of a very high order, and, as already stated, are well entitled to be called superior, even though the course therein may not include the Greek and Latin classics or foreign living languages; while on the other hand many schools, the studies in which are of so high an order, and are followed so far as to overlap the earlier part of an University course, do, nevertheless, administer primary instruction to a very large extent. In the case of superior female, and especially of Convent schools, this union of primary and higher instruction in the same institution is even more apparent; so that while children of very tender years are taught to spell and read in the lower forms, the more advanced pupils receive the utmost finish which our habits assign to female education.

Union of primary and higher instruction in the same school.

EDUCATION.

School tables.

Under these circumstances the nearest and safest approach to the actual numbers receiving instruction of each kind, would be to give the numbers under instruction at different classes of schools. Thus, for instance, instead of stating that so many children receive primary instruction, and so many higher instruction, in a county, we give the number receiving instruction at primary and superior schools respectively. In accordance with this view, Tables have been framed, showing for each county in Ireland the number of pupils receiving instruction in primary and higher schools, and in Colleges and Universities. Considering it also to be of importance to tabulate the schools of each county according to the character of the instruction which they afford, a Table has been constructed upon the returns obtained on Form L No. 2, for the 17th May, 1861, showing for each county the number of schools belonging to each class of education and to the sub-divisions of each class. Summaries of these Tables for each of the four provinces, and for Ireland, are given at pages 46 and 47 of this Report, and at page 1075 of the School Tables.

Higher primary instruction.

Alluding to the circumstance already noticed, that instruction of a high order in every department of English teaching is given in numerous schools which we are obliged to register as primary, we regret that our own returns do not enable us to furnish with all the distinctness we could wish, the statistics of these most important establishments. In Belgium, under the head of "Écoles Primaires Supérieures," and in Germany, as "Real-Schule," the schools of this character are classed as distinctly as any others.

The statistics relative to education amongst the members of the several religious bodies in Ireland, will be found in the Report upon Religions and Education, under which it seems to range most naturally.

Diminution of ignorance. Number of those who "read only" in 1841, 1851, and 1861.

We have now for 1861, as in 1851, the gratification to record a decrease in the proportion of those who can neither read nor write. In 1851, the diminution in the numbers of the absolutely ignorant, compared with those returned as such in 1841, amounted to 4 per cent. of the male, and 8 per cent. of the female population. The diminution, according to the returns of 1861, as compared with 1851, is 7 per cent. males, and 9 per cent. females. This decline in the proportion of the ignorant is due in a notable degree to the general decrease of the people by emigration, and we believe that a very large share of the emigrants from Ireland belonged to the class of the ignorant. On the other hand, it cannot be disputed that the Irish emigration during the last decennial period has consisted very much of persons whose comparatively easy circumstances at once refer them to the class most likely to have received instruction. Those, again, who, were it not for their poverty, extreme old age, or tender years, would have formed part of the emigration, and who, for these reasons, have been left behind, are in all probability included amongst the ignorant, or those who can neither read nor write. One cause which may account, to some small extent, for the diminished proportion of the ignorant, is the decrease in the number of those who were of the "school age" at a time when the means of instruction were so much less abundant than within the last three decades. But the principal cause, we believe, is to be found in the regular spread of instruction, owing to the increased number and efficiency of the Primary Schools; an efficiency which, so far as concerns those in connexion with the National Board, has attracted the commendation of a distinguished Prussian, the Baron Von Holzendorff, who does not hesitate to say that the "circumstances falling under his own observation, enable him to prove how superior the results of the Irish National School teaching are to those obtained in Prussia, although, in Ireland, the Prussian Schools enjoy a very high reputation."*

Primary Schools.

Hitherto no comparison has been instituted between the number of persons who at the close of one decennial period could "read only," and the number of persons whose education at the close of the succeeding period was similarly imperfect. We thought, however, that such a comparison would not be unprofitable, as showing the tendency of elementary instruction to complete itself, to remain stationary, or to recede. It would have been fair to argue from a diminution in the percentage of those who cannot write, to one of three things, namely: that elementary instruction was more carefully administered than heretofore; that the attendance of pupils at school had been more regular; or that it had been continued for a longer period. An increased proportion of those who "read only" would naturally lead to inferences the opposite of those which might be drawn from a diminished proportion; while a uniform, or nearly uniform, percentage might at first seem to favour the conclusion that elementary instruction had not improved its methods. But although we find the number of those who "read only" to maintain in 1861 the exact proportion which it did in 1851, we attempt, at page 30, and with some degree of confidence, to explain the circumstance in a way which involves no suppositions unfavourable to the character or methods of elementary instruction in Ireland.

The rivalry of systems already mentioned has operated largely in bringing about the increase which has taken place in the number of those receiving superior instruction, or to adopt the, perhaps, more accurate language of our own Tables, receiving instruction in superior schools. This increase must distribute itself naturally between those under intermediate and those under University or collegiate teaching; but that division not having been marked in previous Census Returns, the only comparison we are enabled to institute is between the gross numbers of those receiving superior instruction in 1841, 1851, and 1861; taking that instruction to include every degree of teaching between the French or Latin grammar and the full course of university or professional studies. Adhering to the classification adopted in 1841 and 1851, it will be seen that the number under superior instruction in this broad sense, in the year 1861, was 22,357, as against 18,502 in 1851, and 27,391 in 1841, showing an increase of 3,855 in 1861, over 1851, but a decrease of 5,034 as compared with 1841. If, however, the diminution of the population in the interval be taken into account, the number under superior instruction in 1861 will be found to show a large relative increase over that under similar instruction in 1841.

Superior Schools.

Increase in numbers receiving higher instruction.

Additional school queries.

In order to illustrate the necessity of a careful verification of educational returns furnished to a temporary Commission like the present, a tabulated result of answers to the queries addressed to those schools, which, for the reasons already assigned, have been reduced from the rank of superior, is given below. From that Table it will be seen that queries were addressed to 244 schools, respecting the accuracy of returns in which a few pupils were represented as learning a foreign language. Of the original returns 174 were stated, in answer to our queries, to have been correctly filled. In 45 cases the returns were stated to have been filled incorrectly as regards the subject of the query, and in 25 cases pupils were entered as studying Latin and Greek—upon the strength of the Latin and Greek derivations learned from their Grammars, Spelling-books, or Dictionaries. In several instances it appeared that the foreign language supposed to be learned in a National School was taught by the master elsewhere than in the school-house, or, if in the school-house, not during school-time. In a few instances the pupils learning a foreign language were the children of the teachers. The group entitled in the Table "Other Schools," (for which the returns were said to be filled correctly), includes 13 Convent Schools, not in connexion with the National Board; one school, conducted by monks at Roundstone, County of Galway; one school, described as the "Endowed School of Balligan," in the neighbourhood of Ballymoney, County of Antrim; a school, under the patronage of Lord George Hill, in the district of Dunfanaghy, County of Donegal; one school, supported by voluntary contributions, at Maynooth; the school of the London Ladies' Hibernian Society, at Dungannon; the school of the 26th, or "Cameronian" Regiment; one returned as a Congregational School, in the town of Antrim; and, lastly, the school attached to Wilson's Hospital, County of Westmeath.

Intermediate instruction.

Increase of classical and superior schools.

Although unable to institute any general comparison between the numbers receiving intermediate and university education respectively, at the date of taking the present Census, and the numbers of those receiving similar instruction in 1841 and 1851, we are anxious, nevertheless, within the limit of our information, to lay a foundation for future comparison. A great increase has taken place within the last ten years in the number of those higher schools, which for the male sex may be considered intermediate, and which for the female are superior—those in which boys are taught the usual course of Greek and

EDUCATION.

Latin classics, and of elementary mathematics, preparatory for the universities; and those in which girls learn one or more modern languages, together with the accomplishments commonly forming part of female education. These intermediate male schools roughly represent, or at least supply the place of, the establishments known in France as "Lycées," and in Germany as "Gymnasia." Public feeling in Ireland seems within the last decade to have become peculiarly sensitive to the importance of those establishments where the youth of the country are grounded in those studies the pursuit of which is to qualify them for the practice of the several professions, perhaps for a career in politics, and generally for the exercise of that influence which the trained intellect must exercise over the entire nation. How much those institutions are valued in Germany may be inferred, if other proof were wanting, from a passage in the well-known work of Adolphus Franz, upon the statistics of Prussia:—"What the elementary schools are for the general cultivation of the people, the same "are the gymnasia for its superior and learned cultivation. They are the nurseries of the "men who fill high office in the state; they are the sources from which flow all our sciences "and arts; they are the true birthplaces of all the great spirits of the country. A cultivated "nation will for this reason take extraordinary care of its gymnasia; in its interest for "them it will even forget its primary schools, and what the former might claim, with a "complete right of priority, will transfer to the latter. Admitting that the instruction given "in the primary schools is the breath of life, so to speak, which the people at large must "draw, and through which alone it can sustain its intellectual existence, the teaching of "the gymnasia is as the sun, traversing with his light and warmth the air that is necessary "to the people for its social and political life. What wonder, then, if Prussia contribute "out of the public moneys to the support of her gymnasia almost as much again as to the "support of her primary schools? What wonder that the Government should seek to be "informed upon the condition of the gymnasia half-yearly, and should ask after the primary "schools only once in three years?"* This apparently exaggerated preference for classical studies may well be excused in Prussia, when we bear in mind that primary instruction, so far from being neglected in that country, has the repute of being more universal and better organized than in any other part of Europe. But, without making ourselves responsible for this exalted idea of the function of our classical schools, and above all, without adopting the practical consequences drawn from that idea in the last few lines of the passage quoted, we still appreciate so sensibly the real importance of our higher schools, that we have given a careful consideration to the statistics of those establishments, so far as they could be obtained from trustworthy sources.

Classical schools.

Endowed Schools Commission.

The lengthened and minute inquiry carried on by the Endowed Schools Commissioners during the years 1854, 1855, and 1856, originated in an awakening sense of the public to the importance of the precise class of instruction with which we are now dealing. This feeling was quickened by the extinction of the numerous cheap classical schools which had existed throughout the country, prior to the development of the National System of Education; and no doubt received a considerable stimulus from the desire manifested by a portion at least of the population, to share in the advantages of several ancient endowments of this class, the enjoyment of which has hitherto been limited, as well by custom as by the manifest object of the foundations themselves, to members of the Established Church. The most substantial result of this feeling, and that in which the present inquiry is concerned, has been the multiplication of classical schools, without aid from the State, which has taken place since 1851.

Object of increased details.

As our own returns do not afford data upon which to found a comparison between the number of classical schools in 1851 with those in 1861, we have been obliged to resort to other sources of information; and in framing the tables which now for the first time appear in the Irish Census Reports, our principal object has been, as already stated, to establish a standard for future comparison and to encourage the desire evinced by the public of becoming acquainted with the means of instruction in all its departments.

University of Dublin.

University education has shared in the progress by which other branches of instruction have been marked. Since the date of the last Census, the University of Dublin has opened new classes to meet the demand for that special instruction which has been rendered necessary by the test of examination applied to candidates for the public service, more especially for the Civil Service in India. It has, moreover, offered new and valuable prizes to the emulation of its youth in the studentships and non-foundation scholarships, established since the period last referred to. By reference to the University Calendar, and from information supplied to us by the College authorities, we learn that 2,643 students matriculated and that 2,971 degrees were conferred in the University of Dublin during the ten years over which our inquiry extends.

EDUCATION.

The Queen's University.

At the date of our Returns, the Queen's University had nearly reached its thirteenth year. In 1851 it had been only two years in existence, and as the Census Commissioners at that time received no returns from the Colleges in Cork and Belfast, a comparison of the number of students in attendance at each of those institutions, upon the day of taking the Census, in the years 1851 and 1861, respectively, cannot be instituted. By the Queen's University Calendars it appears that the number of degrees conferred during the Census period from 1851 to 1861, was 379. We are not aware of the number of students who matriculated during the decade over which our inquiries extend. It is difficult to measure accurately the extent to which the instruction given through the Queen's University is enjoyed by those for whom it was intended, on account of the presence in its classes of non-matriculated students, who seldom follow a complete course in any of the faculties.

"The Catholic University."

The only other institution in Ireland of an university character, is that known as the "Catholic University," in the city of Dublin, which, although not having a Charter, administers instruction primâ facie, of the same description as that usually given in Universities, and to persons who, but for its existence, would probably receive that class of instruction elsewhere. That institution was opened in the year 1854; but, with the exception of its School of Medicine (the students of which qualify by licences or degrees from the authorized bodies), its constitution is not yet sufficiently settled to permit of its being subjected to the test of progress which has been applied to the recognised Universities. Some of the students who reside in houses connected with the "Catholic University" have been returned upon the Census forms as receiving university education; but in the absence of precise information, we are not enabled to fix the value of the figures representing these numbers. Educational establishments throughout the country are also affiliated to the central institution.

Special Education—Ecclesiastical.

To these should be added other collegiate establishments in which students may qualify for the exercise of a learned profession without resort to an university; a class of colleges which, with the exception of the College of the General Assembly in Belfast,—the Divinity School of the Presbyterian Ministry, (which has not furnished a return upon either of the School Forms),—is limited almost exclusively to the education of aspirants to the Roman Catholic priesthood.

Maynooth College.

The principal establishment of this class is the Royal College of Maynooth, county of Kildare, endowed by the State for the professional education of persons destined for the Roman Catholic priesthood. Provision being made for a fixed number of students, all obliged to reside within the college, the numbers pursuing their studies therein varies but slightly from year to year. The number returned for the 7th April, 1861, was 519. The institution of this class next in importance is the Missionary College of All Hallows, in which students are educated for the Roman Catholic ministry of Great Britain, the Colonies, and America. In the principal house of this institution, at Drumcondra, in Dublin suburbs, it appears that there were 168 students on the 7th April, 1861, and 44 were returned from the preparatory establishment at Stillorgan.

All Hallows College.

Medicine.

On the same level with, and in addition to, the universities, which confer degrees in medicine and surgery,—but in a narrower field of action,—may be placed the special licensing bodies of the medical profession in Ireland, namely, the King's and Queen's College of Physicians and the Royal College of Surgeons.

Medical Schools.

It would be difficult to state accurately the number of medical students in Ireland, distributed as they are through so many independent schools, as well as those attached to the universities; nor would it be accurate to add the entire number of such students as a distinct contingent to those receiving the highest class of instruction, inasmuch as a certain proportion of them are included in the university lists of students in arts, and several pupils in the metropolis attend different schools during the same session. Without, therefore, seeking to include the medical students of Ireland in the total of those receiving the highest class of education, it may be stated that the number receiving medical instruction in the various Medical schools throughout Ireland during the year ended May, 1861, was about 1,200. Of these 301 belonged to the Queen's University, distributed among the provincial Colleges as follows:—106 in Cork, 123 in Belfast, and 72 in Galway; and, in the Metropolis, the anatomical classes (the fairest test of numbers) were, in the University School 101, in that of the Royal College of Surgeons 220, in the "Catholic University" School 100, in the Carmichael School 97, the School of Steevens' Hospital 60, and the Peter-street School, 228. To these may be added about 100 pupils distributed through the different Dublin Schools, but who were not on the anatomical rolls of these institutions, and only a portion of which number can be included in the 1,200.

Legal Instruction.

The only other step in the progress of education between 1851 and 1861, to which it seems necessary to advert, is the system of legal instruction provided by the Benchers of the King's Inns for students of law in both branches of the profession, a reform in which it appears that Ireland took the lead of the sister country.

Education of the population in 1841, 1851, and 1861.

We now present a series of Tables which illustrate the progress of instruction, primary and superior, since 1841. Table VIII., corresponding with that in the Report upon Ages and Education, given by the Census Commissioners, for the year 1851,—shows by provinces, counties, cities, and large towns, the numbers and proportion per cent. of the population who could neither read nor write in the years 1841, 1851, and 1861. While the gross results of this Table exhibit a diminution of absolute ignorance so large as to be matter of congratulation, and while the decrease in the number of those who could neither "read nor write," as disclosed by Tables IX. and X., given on this and the following page, is sufficiently remarkable to induce a belief that the progress of instruction since 1851 has been considerable, it is manifest that a dry list of the numbers of those who "read and write," or "read only," affords no accurate measure of the advance even of elementary instruction. It would be impossible to determine the number of those returned as able to read and write, or to read only, who are, nevertheless, so imperfectly acquainted either with reading or writing, as not to be substantially distinguishable from the absolutely ignorant. In accordance with the modern practice in most primary schools, children are taught to write almost as early as to read, and there can be little doubt that a large proportion of those returned of every age as reading and writing, or as reading only, have but a nominal acquaintance with either of these arts. Admitting, however, that for each locality the amount of substantial instruction at a given time would be inaccurately measured by the classification referred to, still, if we compare time with time, and place with place, the numbers furnished by the present Census Returns must show comparative progress or comparative decline.

Increase of ignorance in 1851, in certain localities.

In 1851, the Census Commissioners had to report that the county of Londonderry, the cities of Cork, Dublin, Kilkenny, Limerick, and Waterford, and the towns of Belfast, Carrickfergus, Drogheda, and Galway, showed an increase of igonorance or, at all events, that instruction had remained stationary in those localities. In the county of Londonderry the increase of ignorance was limited to the male sex; and, generally speaking, in the towns also, it was found to be greater in the male than in the female population. The probable cause of this increase was stated to be the immigration of illiterate persons, more especially of the male sex, from the rural districts, in search of employment. Upon the present occasion we are relieved from the necessity of entering into calculations to account for an increase of ignorance in any part of Ireland, happily none such having taken place; and Table IX. shows the present educational condition of those places which had been unfavourably circumstanced in that respect in 1851.

Comparative education in the sexes.

We find that in 1851, the Census Commissioners, in their analysis of a corresponding Table, selected certain statistics to which we propose to apply the results obtained by the present inquiry. According to the Report upon Ages and Education in 1851, page xiii., it appeared, that while the gross proportionate number of ignorant had diminished during the preceding decade, there was an increase in the number of that class between certain ages and in several places. For example:—In the counties of Carlow, Longford, Wexford, Clare, Limerick, Tipperary, Waterford, Londonderry, and Leitrim, the number of ignorant had increased among the male population between the ages of eleven and fifteen. In the counties of Carlow and Londonderry the number of ignorant had increased in the female population also between the like ages. In all the other counties the relative number of educated females between those ages had increased. In all the counties of Ireland, except Dublin, Kilkenny, Louth, Cork, Waterford, Donegal, Monaghan, Galway, Mayo, Roscommon, and Sligo, the relative number of illiterate males had increased between the ages of sixteen and twenty-five, while the females at the same ages had made considerable advance in education. Table X. shows the decrease of ignorance at various ages in the several counties, cities, and towns in Ireland, between 1851 and 1861.

Educational Maps.

Following the precedents of the years 1841 and 1851, our illustrations include a map of Ireland—in which it is sought to represent by shading, the comparative amount of instruction in each of the Irish counties, regarded as a rural district;—towns containing 2,000 inhabitants and upwards, not having been taken into account in its construction. The educational condition, however, of those towns is stated in Table XII. on page 22.

The observations of the Census Commissioners for 1851, in their Report upon Ages and Education, respecting the relation between the prevalence of inferior habitations and poverty, and the state of ignorance in certain districts, are equally applicable to these districts which were similarly circumstanced, at the time of taking the present Census; and the fact that miserable dwellings and deficient means of existence are inimical to the spread of instruction,

AGES AND EDUCATION.

Density of population and Educational condition.

is abundantly confirmed by other statistical inquiries. The fact, also noticed in 1851, that instruction becomes general in proportion to the density of the population, derives additional confirmation from the statistics of the present Census. The relation, therefore, between the two maps which illustrate the density of the population and the diffusion of instruction respectively, is still the same, and goes to show that the thinly peopled districts are the least educated. As a general rule, where the population is scattered the schools are few, the distances between them great, the attendance irregular, and the instruction desultory.

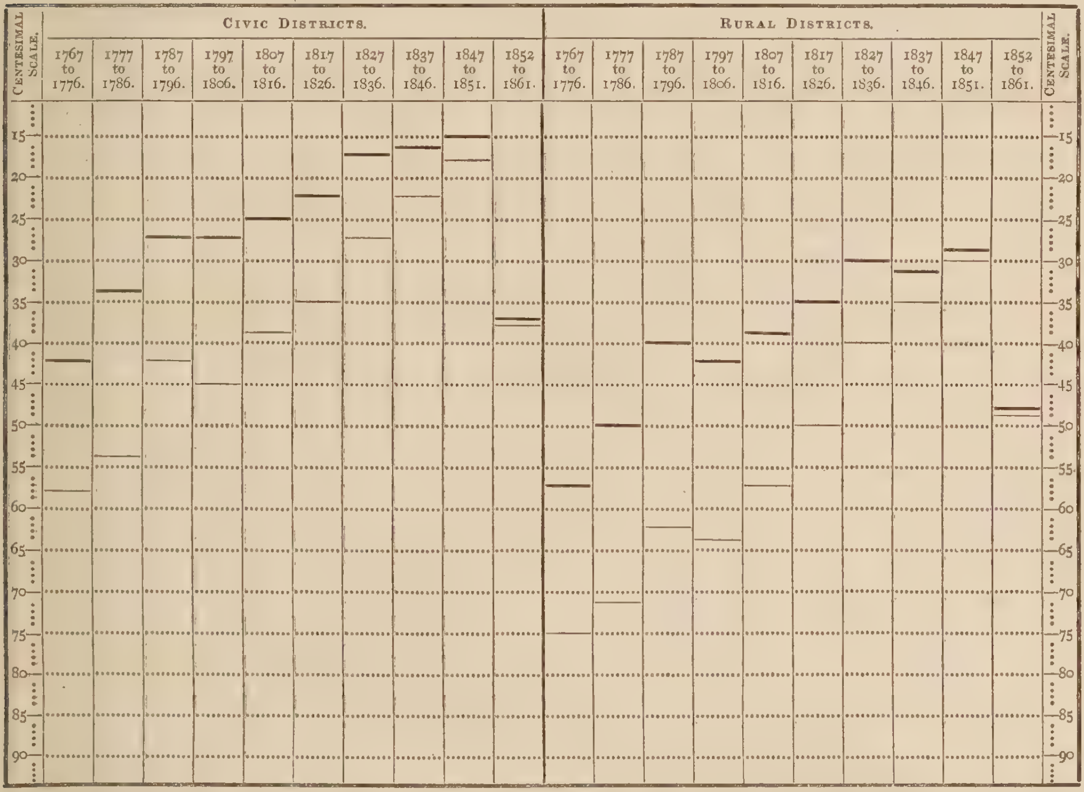
Educational Diagrams.

The following diagrams corresponding with those given in 1841 and 1851, have been framed to show the progress of instruction in Ireland since the year 1767,—"as denoted by the portion of the community five years old and upwards, who can neither read nor write, distinguishing the male from the female population. The figures at the head of the Table denote the years during which the persons now alive were within the educational age, and the side columns, contain a scale showing the proportion per cent. of this class, indicated by the position of the lines in the interior columns. The thick lines represent males; and the thin, females."—See Report on the Census of Ireland for 1841, page xxxiv.

Diagrams showing the Percentage of the Ignorant in the Civic and Rural Districts.



In reading the diagram, it is to be noted that the heavy line opposite the fourth point following the number 30 in the centesimal scale of the second column in the division, headed "Civic Districts," denotes that in the civic districts of Ireland, the proportion of the male population wholly ignorant, who were alive on the 7th April, 1861, and whose ages between the years 1777 and 1786 were from five to fifteen, was 34 per cent. The light line at the fourth point following the number 50 in the same scale indicates that the proportion of the ignorant female population, similarly circumstanced, in respect of age, was 54 per cent. The heavy line in the second column, under "Rural Districts," denotes that the proportion of the ignorant in the male population, under like circumstances as to age with those in the civic districts, was 50 per cent., and the light line in the same column shows the proportion of females, similarly circumstanced, to have been 71 per cent.

Table XIII., given below, shows the per centage of males and females alive at the date of taking the Census for 1851 and 1861, who could neither read nor write,—with the periods during which they were between the ages of five and fifteen.

AGES AND EDUCATION.

Educational Diagrams.

With reference to corresponding diagrams in the Census Publications for 1851, and as regards the necessity for taking into account the emigration from Ireland between the years 1841 and 1851, the Commissioners for the latter date state that "the persons who thus represent the degree of education of the people at the periods mentioned, are only the survivors now living in Ireland of the years specified. This disturbing cause should be borne in mind, when considering the value of these diagrams, as the emigration from this country has been very considerable in amount during the last ten years." These remarks apply equally to the consideration of the value of the figures in all the diagrams now presented.

Ages at which Ignorance was most prevalent.

From the following Table we collect that the period of life exhibiting the largest per centage (22) of ignorance in 1861, was between the ages of 5 and 10 years. The next most considerable percentage, (19), belongs to the period from 16 to 25. The periods from 26 to 35, and from 46 to 55, follow with 12 per cent.; the period between 36 and 45 comes next, with 11 per cent.; the ages between 56 and 65 take the fifth rank, with 10 per cent.; and the period from 11 to 15 years of age occupies the sixth place, with 8 per cent. The advanced periods, from 66 to 75 years old, and from 76 to 85, show 4 and 2 for their percentages, respectively. In 1841 and 1851, as at the date of the present Census, the earliest period,—that from 5 to 10,—disclosed the greatest amount of absolute ignorance; but we have the satisfaction of being enabled to show a well maintained, though gradual decline of that ignorance,—the percentage having fallen from 27 in 1841, to 25 in 1851, and to 22 in 1861. Summing the percentage of the two age periods, from

Ages at which Ignorance was most prevalent.

5 to 10, and from 11 to 15, we find 30 per cent. in 1861, belonging to our assumed educational period, as against 38 per cent. of that age in 1851. This remarkable decline of ignorance is shown more especially by the fall in its percentage between 11 and 15 years of age, from 13 in 1851 to 8 in 1861, whereby it is now reduced to the sixth instead of the third degree, and the whole of this educational period, although still distinguished from the other periods by the largest percentage of ignorance, shows a decrease of 9 per cent. between 1841 and 1861. The period between 16 and 35 years had 30 per cent. in 1851, and 31 per cent in 1861. The percentage of the ignorant between the ages of 5 and 35 was 68 in 1851, and dropped to 61 in 1861, leaving 39 to be distributed over the other periods, instead of 32, as in 1851. It will be observed that the third period in the above Table, viz., between 16 and 25,—has uniformly maintained the second highest percentage from 1841 onwards, and shows an increase of 1 per cent. for 1861. This uniformity, it cannot be doubted, is produced by the operation of some permanent cause, in virtue of which that class is more rapidly filled up by those who pass into it from "the school age" uneducated, and so continue, than it is diminished by the number, whether of the instructed or of the uninstructed, who rise from it into the next period, or are drafted off by emigration or death. The increase of 1 per cent. in the number of its ignorant is temporary and accidental, and will, perhaps, be sufficiently explained by reference to the Age Table, page 6, from which it appears that the population between the ages of 15 and 25 exceeded in 1861 the population between the extremes of any other decennial age-period; whereas in 1851 the educational period, or school age, from 5 to 15, had a much larger proportion of the population than belonged to any other of the decennial periods. From 26 to 35 and from 36 to 45, the percentage of ignorant (12 and 11 respectively), is the same for the years 1851 and 1861. The remaining age periods as far as 85, show an increase more or less considerable in the percentage of their ignorant.

Education in 1841, 1851, and 1861.

Believing that important educational statistics might be collected from a comparison, not merely between the growth or decrease of ignorance at certain periods, but also between the increase or decrease of elementary instruction in its two degrees of "reading only," and of "reading and writing," we present the following Tables:—

Increase of Education.

The general results of the two foregoing Tables, and of that upon the next page, show for each of the counties, cities, and towns included in them, an increase in the percentage of those who "read and write," varying from 12 per cent. in the City of Kilkenny and North Riding of Tipperary to 5 per cent. in the City of Dublin and in the counties of Antrim and Donegal. In the scale of progress in the four provinces, as indicated by the increased percentage of those who "read and write," Leinster ranks first, showing an increase of 10 per cent.; Munster second, with 9 per cent.; and Ulster and Connaught third, with 7 per cent. each. The increase for all Ireland in the number of those who now read and write is shown to be 8 per cent. over those returned in 1851. In the position assignable to each of the provinces, from the decline of absolute ignorance, Munster comes first, with 10 per cent.; Connaught second, with 9 per cent; Leinster third, with 8 per cent.; and Ulster last, with 5 per cent. of decrease. The decrease for all Ireland was 8 per cent.

Referring now more particularly to Table XVI., page 27, it seems worthy of notice, that whereas in the year 1851 the relative number of those knowing how to read and write had increased throughout the country, as compared with those having the same knowledge in 1841, the absolute number was less in every county of Ireland, with the exception of Dublin, Louth, Antrim, Donegal, Down, and Tyrone. The absolute number had increased in all the cities and principal towns, with the exception of Kilkenny. In 1861, upon the other hand, the absolute number of those knowing how to read and write has increased in every county, with the exception of Carlow, Wexford, and Tipperary—in each of which, while the relative number was largely increased, the absolute number had somewhat diminished. In the City of Kilkenny, in the Town of Galway, and in the City of Limerick, the relative number of those knowing how to read and write had greatly risen, while the absolute number was something less than in 1851. Between the years 1841 and 1851 the number of those who could read and write had been reduced from 1,966,156 to 1,938,685, or by 27,471 persons; and in the year 1861 it had risen to 2,105,958. The number of those who "read only," which in 1841 was 1,413,377, fell in 1851 to 1,203,046, and in 1861, to 1,022,787. Lastly, the number of those who could neither read nor write, amounting to 3,766,066, in 1841, was reduced in 1851 to 2,766,283, and again in 1861 to 1,973,382.

Uniformity of Percentage of those who could "read only."

It is thus manifest, that while between the years 1841 and 1851, the proportion of those knowing how to read and write had risen from 28 to 33 per cent. of the population five years old and upwards, and had increased in 1861 to 41 per cent. of the same;—and while between 1841 and 1851 the ignorant had been reduced from 53 to 47 per cent., experiencing a further reduction to 39 per cent. in 1861—the relative number of those who "read only" rose but 1 per cent. between 1841 and 1851, and bore the same proportion (20 per cent.), in 1861, to the population five years old and upwards, which it did in 1851. This remarkable uniformity in the proportion of those "who read only," to the general population of the ages already mentioned during two successive decades, is not at first sight easily accounted for, side by side with the great change which has taken place in the like proportion of those who "read and write" and of the "ignorant," but is too striking not to be in accordance with some fixed law. The proportion of those who read and write was increased 5 per cent. between 1841 and 1851, and that of the ignorant was diminished 6 per cent. during the like period. During the last decade the rate of increase and decrease between those two extremes respectively has been 8 per cent. The agency which preserves this uniformity in the percentage of those who "read only" to the general population, must act independently of accidental causes, or be but slightly affected by them; so that whether absolute ignorance advances or declines, and no matter by what rapid stages,—the instructed portion of the people will contain a relatively uniform number whose instruction stops short at reading. This agency, we believe, is to be sought for, not in the defects of systems of education, the irregular attendance of pupils, nor yet in their too early withdrawal from school, but is to be found in the fact well known, that a large proportion of those who have learned both to read and write in our primary schools subsequently engage in occupations, such as field and other manual labour, in which they have seldom occasion either to write or to read writing, a state of things which in course of time induces a complete forgetfulness of what they had once learned. The knowledge of reading, on the other hand, is kept up amongst persons even of this class by the use of their books of devotion, at least once a week, and also, it may be presumed, by the ready access which the present low prices afford to newspapers and other cheap periodicals.

Probable cause of persons being able to "read only."

This view of the case is confirmed by reference to the Age Tables, given at page 6, from which it appears that the population of Ireland in 1861 under 45 years of age was as many as 4,543,806 out of the entire population of 5,798,967. The oldest person under 45 years in 1861 cannot have been eight years old in 1824, and in that year the number of children under instruction in Ireland, according to the Reports of the Irish Education Inquiry (1825–28), was 456,549. The "Kildare-place Society" had been in operation since 1811, the "Christian Brothers' Schools" since 1820;—the "National System" was inaugurated in 1833, and the oldest portion of the population of Ireland under 40 years in 1861 were in the year 1833 within the educational age. The population under 40 years numbered 4,199,648 in 1861, so that the great majority of the Irish people have grown up within reach of primary instruction administered according to methods presumed to be continually improving. Dating back from 1824 and 1833, the principal systems of primary education, even if not so completely developed as at present, were working throughout the country; and it is certain that such a thing as instruction in reading merely is almost unknown to any of those systems. From these facts we are entitled to infer that most of the adult population who have been returned as "reading only," left school with some knowledge, however imperfect, of the art of writing; and that while we may expect the progress of instruction to transfer large numbers from the class of the ignorant to the list of those who "read and write," the number of those reading only will maintain a pretty uniform proportion, so long as the occupations to which we have referred continue to bring writing into disuse with those engaged in them.

Probable Education of Emigrants.

The Table at page 27 also enables us to arrive at some conclusions, not altogether without value, respecting the class of persons by the loss of whom, principally through emigration, the population of the country has been diminished. The decrease between 1851 and 1861, of the population five years old and upwards, was 802,758, and the decrease in the number of ignorant no less than 792,901, or within 9,857 of the former number. The number of those "who could read only" has diminished to a much smaller extent, being less by only 180,259 in 1861 than it was in 1851; while the population knowing how to "read and write," shows an increase of 167,273. If we are correct in our ideas respecting those "who could read only," very few can have passed from that class to increase the number of those who "read and write;" and almost the entire of the 180,259 mere "readers," by which the population of that class has been diminished, may be regarded as withdrawn altogether from the general population. The diminution in the number of the ignorant is compounded of those who in the ordinary course of instruction have passed to the educated class, and of those who have been removed from the country whether by emigration or by death. It cannot be doubted that the number of those who read and write has been diminished in a greater degree by emigration than it has been enlarged by natural increase. Had it not been largely recruited from the numbers of the ignorant who afterwards became instructed, so far from being absolutely greater than it was in 1851, it would certainly be far less. The class of the ignorant, therefore, must have been diminished to an extent sufficient not only to fill the place of those withdrawn by emigration, but to bring up the number of those who read and write to its actual excess over what it had been in 1851. That excess we know to be 167,273. Allowing a like number to fill the places of those who had been removed, we should have a transfer, in round numbers, of something more than 334,000, from the class of the ignorant to that of the instructed. Deducting this number from the total diminution of the ignorant, we shall have a remainder of 458,901, representing the probable number of the ignorant who have been withdrawn from the population by extraordinary causes. If to this number we add the decrease in the number of those who read merely, we shall have 639,160 as representing the sum of the ignorant and of the readers only, by which the population has been reduced; and subtracting this sum from the reduction of the population five years old and upwards, we shall have 163,598 to represent our loss from the class of those who could read and write. These numbers, it is hardly necessary to say, are approximate only, and take no account of the extent to which the population should, in ordinary course, have experienced an increase; but there can be little doubt of their establishing the fact, that the greatest decrease in the community was from among the numbers of the absolutely ignorant; that the diminution next in extent was from the number of those who read only; and that the most educated contributed least, although not a little, to Irish emigration. This will become even more apparent by reference to individual counties, as, for instance, to the County of Cork, in which the number of those who can "read and write" has been increased between 1851 and 1861 by 5,247, while the number of those who "read only" has been reduced by 11,820, and that of the absolutely ignorant by 98,771, a number the greatness of which it is not possible to account for without ascribing a very large portion of it to emigration.

Provincial Percentage of Education and Ignorance.

Of the provinces, Ulster is that which shows the smallest percentage (30) of ignorant; Leinster comes next, showing 31; Munster next, with 46; and Connaught last, presenting 57 per cent. of ignorant. In whatever progress, however, is indicated by the decrease of ignorance, Munster and Connaught, as already observed, mark the largest advance, ignorance having declined in each of those provinces, 10 per cent. in the former and 9 per cent. in the latter; the province of Leinster comes next, ignorance having been there diminished 8 per cent.; and the province of Ulster last, in which the number of the ignorant has been reduced but 5 per cent. The province of Leinster has the largest percentage (49) of persons able to read and write; the province of Ulster ranks next, having 42 per cent of the same class; the province of Munster follows next, with 40 per cent.; and Connaught last, with only 28 per cent. Small, however, as is the percentage in Connaught of those who read and write, the advancement of that province in this particular is equal to that of Ulster,—the increase of education in both provinces being 7 per cent. Leinster holds the first place as to progress, showing an advance of 10 per cent.; Munster follows, with an advance of 9; Ulster and Connaught taking the third place, with the increase already stated. The slight advantage which Ulster has over Leinster in the smaller percentage of the ignorant, is derived from the much larger percentage in the number of those who read only; the rates for this class in the four provinces being—in Ulster, 27; in Leinster, 20; in Connaught, 15; and in Munster, 14 per cent.

Attendance at School.

As was the case in 1851, we are enabled to report an increase in the attendance at school; for, although the returns for the week ended 13th April, 1861, compared with the returns for the corresponding week in 1851, show a slight decrease in the proportion of persons attending school to the general population, yet, upon referring to Tables XXII. and XXIII., at page 39, it will be seen that the proportion of those persons to the population between the ages of 5 and 15 has risen somewhat in 1861.

EDUCATION.

Attendance at School.

The occupation column, in "Form A," was designed to include, amongst other matters, not only those members of the family who should be actually at school on the day of taking the Census, but those who might be in course of instruction at home, and also such as were habitual attendants at school, but who were absent from school on the day in question, or during the week for which the school forms were required to be filled. As was anticipated, therefore, the numbers in the occupation column of the family returns have been considerably in excess of the numbers returned on the school forms. The following observations of the Census Commissioners for 1851, respecting this excess, will apply, therefore, to similar circumstances apparent in the returns for 1861;—"On comparing the family returns with the school forms, it appears that a much larger number was attending school according to the family returns. The difference between the two returns may be accounted for by supposing that heads of families returned their children as 'attending school,' though they might not have been in attendance on that day. That their children were not in attendance at the ordinary day schools on the 30th of March, 1851,—the date fixed by the Act 13 & 14 Vic., c. 44, for taking the Census,—will be evident, when it is remembered that that date was Sunday; some, however, of the number may have been returned, because they were in attendance at Sunday schools. If we suppose that those who were returned in each family as 'attending school,' were receiving instruction, either at home, or as pupils on the 'rolls' of some of the schools of the country, the two returns will afford distinct heads of information: the School Return showing the average attendance of pupils during one week, and the Family Return the number of persons under instruction, either at home or at school, on one particular day of the year 1851."

The excess of the numbers returned upon the "A Forms" as attending school, at the date of taking the Census, over the numbers returned upon the school forms as attending during the week which ended 13th April, shows something of an increase for the year 1861; the excess in 1851, having been 201,525, and that in 1861, 208,822 for all Ireland. If we consider the great diminution of the population in 1851 as compared with 1861, the supplement which the family returns have afforded to the school returns must be considered large. Both returns show an absolute decrease in the number of those under instruction in 1861; the numbers taken from the "A Forms" for 1851 being 705,990, and those for 1861, 645,695; while the numbers from the school returns for the week ended the 12th April, 1851, were 504,465, and those from the returns for the week ended 13th April, 1861, only 436,873. Having regard, however, to the diminution of the population between the years 1851 and 1861, the numbers under instruction in the latter year will be found to have more than maintained the proportion which they bore to the population at large in the year 1851. In that year, according to the family returns, 107·7 in every 1,000; and according to the school returns 76·9 in every 1,000 were under instruction. In 1861 the proportion, according to the family returns, was 111·3 in every 1,000, and according to the school returns for the week ended April 13th, 75·3 in every 1,000.

With reference to that part of the extract just quoted from the Report of the Census Commissioners for 1851, which says that the family returns may be taken as showing "the number of persons under instruction, either at home or at school, on one particular day," we may here observe that the School Forms—L No. 2, and L No. 3,—afforded the means of speculating at least, upon the extent to which the occupation column of the family returns may be relied upon, as showing the particulars referred to. The family returns for the year 1861, represent 645,695 persons to have been under instruction, either at home or at school, on the 7th April in that year. The returns upon the form L No. 2, given in pursuance of due notice, represent the number of pupils in actual attendance at the schools which supplied those returns to be 466,818 on the 17th May 1861, or less by 178,877 than the number taken from the family returns. The number returned as attending school during the week ended April 13th, 1861, was 436,873, or less by 29,945 than the numbers shown by the Forms L No. 2, for a single day (the 17th May), and less by 208,822, than the number derived from the family returns. The surprisingly large number of 208,822,—the difference between the results of the family returns and those of the returns upon Form L,—must be taken to represent, in a very general way, the entire number of those who being habitual attendants at school, were, nevertheless, absent therefrom during the week which ended April 13th; and of those who, although under instruction, habitually received such elsewhere than at school.

Taking into account that the occupation column in the family returns did not expressly include those who were under instruction otherwise than at school, at the date of taking the Census, it becomes apparent that the figures supplied by that column, if supposed to represent the number attending school upon a single day, would immensely exaggerate that amount. The returns upon "Form L No. 2," furnished for a single day, may be regarded as giving an exceedingly high average, or more than an average for a day's attendance, because the managers and masters of the various schools having had ample notice of the date for which the return was to be made, in all probability exerted themselves to procure a full attendance for that day. Nevertheless the attendance, upon the 17th of May, falls short of the figures in the family returns by 178,877 persons. If, therefore, we suppose that the returns for the week ended 13th April, 1861, were supplemented by the calling in of all those to whom attendance at school was in any degree habitual, the residue of 178,877 persons, composing the excess apparent upon the family returns, must consist—first, of those whose attendance at school is so irregular as to be merely nominal, and secondly, of those who receive instruction at home. Although we have no means of measuring the number of the latter class, there can be no doubt that it is comparatively small, and we are forced to the conclusion that the number of those whose attendance at school is purely nominal must be very much larger than might have been expected. If, however, this conclusion required confirmation, we find it in the results supplied by the returns made from the school rolls, which represent the number of those who at one time or another during the year ended March 31st, 1861, have made their appearance in school as 804,974, or 159,279 in excess of the number furnished by the family returns; and taken as including, not only regular attendants at school, but every one reputed to be in course of instruction at school or at home. But if we look to the number appearing upon the returns to our Form L No. 2, as showing the very highest probable attendance for a single day, the disparity between the number upon the school rolls and those in anything like habitual attendance, becomes still more apparent; the difference being no less than 338,156. This disparity would have been much greater had we been furnished with returns to Form L No. 3, by all the schools from which returns were received upon the Census Form L No. 2. Such, however, was not the case, and the number 804,974, taken from the returns to Form L No. 3, is very slightly in excess of the 803,364 pupils on the rolls of the National Schools for the year ended December, 1861, as given in the Twenty-eighth Report of the Commissioners of National Education in Ireland, page 8, for that year.

EDUCATION.

Attendance at School.

Notwithstanding the slight increase in the proportion of persons attending school between the ages of five and fifteen (as returned at page 39), we have to report that, an apparently undue proportion of the ignorant was between these ages, the assumed educational period. This, however, will appear less surprising when we take into account that the persons between these ages form 20·8 per cent. of the entire population, and also how large a number of those in actual attendance at school, although learning to read and write, cannot as yet be said to read, much less to write; nor, on the other hand, can it be doubted (as already observed at page 19), that many of those returned to us upon the school lists as reading and writing, are so very imperfectly acquainted with those arts as, without any blame to teachers or to systems, to range somewhat doubtfully amongst those who "read and write."

Table XX.—on the following page, which corresponds with that given in the Census Report for 1851, at p. xxv.—was founded upon our returns for the week ended the 13th April, 1861, and shows the population for each county, city, and principal town, distinguishing sexes, between the age of five and sixteen; the number and percentage of this population, distinguishing sexes, in attendance at schools; the like statistics without distinction of sexes; and the average number of pupils attending each school:—

We have received returns upon Form L, from 9,839 schools, showing the attendance at each school during the week ended the 13th April, 1861. The attendance for that period was 436,873 of all ages, consisting of 235,119 male and 201,754 female pupils. The number of schools from which similar returns were obtained at the corresponding period in 1851 was 9,508; and the attendance for the week ended 12th of April in that year was 504,465, showing an increase of 331 schools, but a decrease of 67,592 pupils in the year 1861. Following up the comparison instituted in 1851, we find that whereas in that year 76·9 in every 1,000 were attending school, there were in 1861 only 75·3 for every 1,000.

Returns were received upon Form L No. 2, from 10,170 schools, showing the number of pupils attending in each, upon the 17th of May, 1861, and a total attendance for that day, of 466,818, or 80·5 for every 1,000 of the population; while the returns upon our "Form L No. 3," shows the attendance in each of 8,749 schools for the year which ended the 31st of March, 1861. The facts ascertained by these school schedules have been tabulated on the three following pages. It will be perceived that the number of schools furnishing returns upon Form L No. 3, was smaller than the number of those which furnished returns upon Form L No. 2. This may be due to the circumstance that in very many schools, including some of the highest character, no roll is kept, and that for such, a return of the daily attendance would be nearly impossible, or at least conjectural. To fill that return was a task requiring much time and labour even for schools possessing a roll; and it is not therefore surprising that several Masters or Managers should have avoided its preparation, as the return was not compulsory. In the case of the great majority of schools, the correspondence between returns for the week ended the 13th April, and for the 17th day of May, shows that the attendance for the former period was a fair average. The principal advantage derivable from the third set of returns on Form L No. 3, belongs to the statement of attendance for an entire year, contained therein. In addition, therefore, to the foregoing numbers, those last-named returns show a maximum attendance throughout the year of 804,974 pupils at schools principally in connexion with the National Board, for nearly all of which returns were received, a result of no small importance when it is considered that the pupils of the National Schools are 79·3 per cent. of the entire number attending schools in Ireland. See School Tables, page 1185.

EDUCATION.

Attendance at School.

To the foregoing Table, framed upon the returns on "Form L No. 3," and showing the actual attendance of pupils during the year ended March 31st, 1861,—now for the first time introduced into the Census publication,—we attach considerable value, as it measures with, perhaps, the utmost attainable accuracy the attendance at schools of all kinds throughout Ireland during a single year. It shows by sexes the number of children who have at any time attended school during that year, the numbers whose attendance was within certain selected limits, as "under 5 days,"—5 and under 20,—20 and under 40 days, and so on; and the percentage of such numbers to the total in attendance. Conceiving that it would be an object of legitimate anxiety to those interested in schools under the management of the principal educational bodies to determine the comparative regularity of attendance in various classes of schools, we have grouped the schools of Ireland in relation to their government or direction;—as connected with the National Board, with the Church Education Society, the Christian Brothers, and other Roman Catholic Communities; with other Societies or Boards; and, finally, as Private. Confining ourselves for the present to the general result contained in the two last columns of Table XXI, it appears that out of the entire number of 804,974 pupils returned to us as upon the school-rolls throughout Ireland, the number of those whose attendance did not reach 60 days, or about two working months, was 316,132, or 39·3 per cent of the entire. Out of this number, those whose attendance was smallest, or purely nominal (under 5 days), was 23,173, or 2·9 per cent. of the whole; those whose attendance was not below 5, but did not reach 20 days, amounted to 86,101, or 10·7 per cent. of the entire; those whose attendance was between 20 and 40 days, reached the large number of 107,590, or 13·4 per cent. of the whole attendance, while those whose attendance ranged between 40 and 60 days was 99,268, or 12·3 per cent. of all upon the rolls.

It may be taken for granted that some of those returned as attending school for short periods during the year 1861, had, in previous years, made progress in the studies proper to their several courses of instruction; but with due allowance for this circumstance, and although the general attendance at school during the year 1861, as compared with that during the year 1851, may exhibit increase,—the results collected from Table XXI. cannot be deemed satisfactory in an educational point of view, when they show so large a proportion of the entire school-going population as 39·3 per cent., in attendance for various periods, the longest of which does not amount to two months. It is some gratification, however, to state, that the highest percentage of attendance is for a period which represents a substantial course of instruction—100 and under 150 days;—the number returned for which is 150,963, or 18·8 per cent of the entire. The percentage next in order is also considerable, and represents a valuable attendance of from 150 to under 200 days;—the numbers so attending being 111,027, or 13·8 per cent., of those on the rolls. The attendance for between 200 and 300 days is not inconsiderable, 67,981 pupils, or 8·4 per cent., having followed instruction during that portion of the year 1861. The attendance during more than 300 days, was only one-half per cent. The circumstances of the Irish people, more especially during the year 1861, render it not difficult to enumerate some, at least, of the causes which operated to diminish the attendance at school. The principal are to be found in the agricultural pursuits of the majority of the people, by which children are withdrawn from school at certain seasons of the year, as in seed-time and harvest; and in the distress which has been so prevalent throughout the country during the last three years. The want of decent or sufficient clothing contributes even more, perhaps, than the want of food to irregularity of attendance at our primary schools, and it works all the more strongly by reason of the salutary practice according to which the personal neatness and cleanliness of the pupils have been enforced in the management of Irish schools. It will be observed that in every instance the attendance of females is very much less than that of males, a circumstance accounted for by the early requirements for female help in the households of the struggling and of the poor.

Before entering upon the classification of schools, or of instruction, we proceed to exhibit Tables showing, as in 1851, by sexes the population at each age from 5 to 15 inclusively, with the numbers attending, and those not attending school, and the proportion per cent. of non-attendance at each age; and also, as in 1851, a Table showing, for each of the provinces, and for Ireland, the relation between the numbers of those not attending school from 5 to 15 inclusively, and the number of persons of the like ages who could neither read nor write. Both these tables have been framed upon the returns for the weeks which ended the 12th of April, 1851, and 13th April, 1861, respectively.

In 1851 the males attending school between the ages of 5 and 15 were as 1 to 3·8; and the females between the same ages, as 1 to 4·3; in the year 1861 the males between these ages were as 1 to 3·2; and the females, 1 to 3·6; thus showing an increase in the attendance of both sexes for the latter year.

Primary and Superior Schools.

We now submit a Table showing the number, ages, and sexes of pupils attending primary and superior schools in the rural and civic districts of Ireland. This Table does not give the denominations, as adopted in the Census Report for 1851 (p. xxiv.), as we have recast that Table (see pages 44–5 in this Report); but the total of the abstract on the next page will answer for comparison, as to rural and civic districts, with the total of the Table in the Census Report for 1851, to which we have referred.

EDUCATION.

From Table XXIV. on the foregoing page, it appears that the number attending primary schools during the week which ended April 13th, 1861, was 414,516, as against 485,880 in 1851, and 475,559 in 1841, and that the number attending superior schools in 1861, according to the measure of superiority we have adopted, was 22,357, being in the ratio of 1 in every 259 of the population; the ratio in 1851 was 1 in every 354; and in 1841, 1 in every 299.

Reformatory Schools.

In the year 1858, the Legislature adopted the principle that, for the youthful criminals of Ireland, punishment should not be merely vindictive, exemplary, or deterrent, but should include a course of instruction and reformation which might one day restore the offender to a place in society. This principle had long been acknowledged in several foreign countries, and had fully vindicated itself, especially in France, by the success which followed the efforts of the law to enlighten and reform those youthful offenders, in whose favour it allows the merciful intendment, that they have acted without the faculty of discriminating between right and wrong.* The practical application of this principle was of more recent date in Great Britain, but in August, 1858, the Royal Assent was given to the Irish Reformatory Schools Act (21st & 22nd Vic., cap. 103), whereby Judges and Magistrates are empowered to sentence juvenile offenders to lengthened periods of detention in Reformatory Schools, after their committal to prison for a short interval. By the seventh section of the Act, it is provided that no young offender "shall be liable or directed to be sent to any Reformatory School, except to some one Reformatory under the exclusive management of persons of the same religious persuasion as that professed by the parents or guardians of such juvenile offender; and in all cases in which the religion of the parents or guardians of such juvenile offender is unknown, the said juvenile offender shall be considered as belonging to that religious persuasion in which he or she shall appear to have been baptized, or of which he or she shall profess to be a follower,"—a provision which accounts for the fact, that the several Reformatory Schools which have been established in Ireland are strictly denominational establishments.

Upon the night of the 7th April, 1861, there existed in Ireland nine of these Institutions, six of which, four for girls and two for boys, have been certified for Roman Catholics, and three for Protestants—viz., two for boys, and one for girls. Four of these Reformatory Schools are metropolitan; and are situated, in Cork-street and Rehoboth-place, and at High Park and Golden-bridge, in the suburban district of the city of Dublin. The others are St. Kevin's, at Glencree, county of Wicklow; St. Joseph's, in Limerick city; St. Patrick's, at Upton, county Cork; the Malone Reformatory at Belfast, and that at Spark's Lake, near the town of Monaghan.

Ages and Education of Inmates in Reformatory Schools.

By the returns received from these Institutions it appears, that on the night of the 7th April, 1861, the number of juvenile offenders detained in them was 406, of whom 300 were males and 106 females. Of these 19 were males and 8 females under the age of twelve years; 114 males and 38 females were between twelve and fourteen, and 167 males and 60 females over fourteen years. As regards instruction, 209 boys and 52 girls were returned as able to read and write; 64 boys and 43 girls as being able to read only, and 27 boys and 11 girls not able to read or write.

From the report of Sir Walter Crofton, the then Inspector of Reformatories, dated November 30th, 1861, we learn that "the total number of juveniles under detention in Ireland on the 31st March, 1861, was 303 boys and 102 girls."† The total of these numbers, 405, is one less than that furnished upon our returns a week later, and from these latter we are enabled to supply the education of the reformatory pupils, which is not mentioned in that report.

The following particulars, taken from the recently published Report of P. J. Murray, Esq., Inspector of Reformatory Schools for juvenile offenders, respecting the ages and education of the pupils, is so interesting, as illustrating the relation between ignorance and crime, that we have thought it desirable to notice them in this place.‡

From the opening of the first Reformatory, on the 21st December, 1858, to the 31st December, 1862, as many as 754 persons, 558 males and 196 females, had been committed to these institutions, and of this number 591 were still in detention at the latter date. The ages of these 754 pupils at the period of committal were as follows:—48 were under ten years of age; 150 were twelve; 200 were between twelve and fourteen; 100 were about fifteen; 200 were sixteen; and 56 were between sixteen and eighteen years of age.

From this it appears that juvenile offenders are most numerous between the ages of twelve and fourteen, and also during the seventeenth year; that the next highest number is of those in their thirteenth year; that the period between sixteen and eighteen comes next, and that the offenders under ten are, as might be expected, the fewest in number.

Education.

Reformatories.

The educational condition of the 591 under detention on the 31st December, 1862, is represented to have been as follows, at the date of their committal:—296 were entirely ignorant; 150 could spell small words; 100 could read, write, and cipher a little; 10 could read, write, and cipher well; and 5 were rather superiorly instructed.

The relationship between ignorance and crime being established by the foregoing summary as well as by criminal statistics generally, the following statement of educational progress in the Reformatory Schools of Ireland, on the 31st December, 1862, cannot fail to be matter of encouragement:—150 could spell words of two syllables; 262 could read simple lessons; 139 could read, write, and cipher well; 22 could read, write, and cipher a little; and 18 could read and write fairly.

It is right to observe, that the literary instruction communicated in the Reformatory Schools has been limited, by those who have made the system their special study, to the elementary and indispensable knowledge represented by the foregoing remarks; and that industrial training in agriculture, mechanical trades, and other employments, according to the sex of the pupil, is that principally administered in these institutions. The majority of the female schools are under the excellent management of the Sisters of Mercy.

Continental Education.

The course of studies belonging to that class of instruction which we have ventured to call "higher primary," varies considerably for different countries. Thus, in Belgium it comprises, not only a more developed teaching of the usual elementary instruction, but also drawing, principally linear, surveying, and other applications of practical geometry, music, gymnastics, and the elements of geography and history, especially Belgian. In each of these schools the languages learned are at least two, French and Flemish, for all the provinces, except that of Luxemburg, in which German is substituted for Flemish; while several of the schools of this class throughout the country add English, German, and book-keeping to the course. The teaching of the French schools of this class does not differ materially from that of the Belgian. In Prussia, the Real-Schule are divided into two classes, namely, the Mittel-Schule and the Hohere-Burger-Schule, the studies in both of which correspond pretty nearly with those in the French and Belgian schools in the same degree, unless that the studies in the Hohere-Burger-Schule are somewhat more advanced, and that their classes are followed by pupils beyond the usual school age. In Austria, also, the schools which impart this higher primary instruction, are divided into Unter-Real-Schule and Ober-Real-Schule, corresponding pretty nearly with the Prussian classification already mentioned; and it is worthy of notice, that in most of the Austrian provinces, in which, as in Ireland, two sections of the people speak different languages, both these languages are taught even in the primary schools.

Programme of studies by Board of National Education.

Making allowance, however, for the greater expansion which seems to be given in some countries to the "higher primary" instruction, we think that a portion of the instruction administered in the schools connected with the National Board, and in many other schools throughout the country, is entitled to be classed as "higher primary," in the sense that it largely complements and develops the elementary teaching, which is understood to communicate a moderate knowledge of reading, writing, and arithmetic. From the subjoined programme of studies for the fourth and fifth classes of schools in connexion with the National Board, it will be apparent, that such of the schools in question as have a fourth or fifth class, may properly range under the head of "higher primary":—

"IV. Class.—Pupils enrolled One Quarter or more in the Fourth Class will be expected—

1. To read with fluency, correctness, and intelligence.
2. To answer readily on the subject-matter of the Lessons they may have already read, and to explain with clearness the meaning of the words contained in them.
3. To know the Prefixes, Affixes, and principal Roots.
4. To know so much of English Grammar as to be able to parse easy sentences.
5. To know the Maps of all the Continents and of Ireland.
6. To know the definitions of the more common technical terms of Geography, as Axis, Poles, Equator, Latitude, Longitude, Zones, &c.
7. To write a good hand.
8. To write correctly from Dictation sentences selected from the Third Book.
9. To know all the Arithmetical Tables, and to be able to write out from memory, and in a neat and correct form, any one of them.
10. To be able to work questions in Proportion, Fractions, and Practice.

V. Class.—Pupils enrolled One Quarter or more in the Fifth Class will be expected—

1. To read with entire ease, fluency, and judgment, both poetry and prose.
2. To answer with intelligence and judgment on the subject-matter of the Lessons already learnt by them.
3. To analyze the words of their ordinary Lessons, pointing out their Roots, Prefixes, and Affixes, and to explain their meaning with clearness and precision.
4. To analyze and parse correctly Compound Sentences.
5. To know the Geography of the British Empire, and the simpler portions of the Geography Generalized.
6. To write a good hand with ease and freedom.
7. To write correctly from Dictation any ordinary sentences selected for them.
8. To write out from memory, with correct spelling and syntax, the substance of any fable or short story chosen from the Second or Third Book.

11. To know how to keep Cash, Personal, Real, and Farm Accounts, and how to write out Bills, Shop Accounts, &c.
12. To draw on slate or paper any of the simple plane Geometrical Figures."

EDUCATION.

Report of Commissioners of National Education for 1861.

The Reports of the Commissioners of National Education in Ireland, laid before Parliament every year, enable us to state the number of schools in which the courses of higher primary instruction are followed, and the number of scholars engaged in those studies. Accordingly, we find from the Report of the Commissioners, for the year ended the 31st December, 1861, that the number of such schools was 4,032, and that the number of scholars following that course was, during the last quarter of the year, 36,538 out of a total upon the rolls of 588,729, being somewhat more than an average of nine pupils for each of the 4,032 schools out of 5,830 then in operation. It is to be observed, however, that the number of pupils receiving the class of instruction indicated by the Fourth and higher Books, greatly differs in various schools; in some instances being very large, as in that of St. Finbar's Convent School in the county of Cork, where it amounted to 176, and in other cases (too numerous for reference) not exceeding one. The province of Munster shows the largest proportion of children (12,053) receiving higher primary teaching through the agency of the National Board; Ulster follows with 11,675; Leinster comes next with 8,679; and Connaught holds the fourth place with 4,131. This return, although incomplete as a representation of the state of higher primary instruction in Ireland, is, nevertheless, of great value, when we bear in mind the statement of the Commissioners at p. 10 of their Report, that "nearly one-seventh of the entire population are enrolled as pupils of the Schools in connexion with the Board."

Higher Primary Instruction.

The published reports of the Church Education Society, afford us no means of determining in how many of its schools this extended course of primary instruction is followed. As a matter of course, however, the training schools of this Society in Dublin and Bandon may be taken to be of the class referred to, although we have no means of classifying the pupils frequenting them according to the character of the instruction which they receive. Similar remarks apply to the schools of the Christian Brothers, in which it appears, by the Report of the Endowed Schools Commissioners, that English instruction receives the most careful and successful cultivation, but regarding which we are not enabled to collect any statistics applicable to higher primary instruction, owing to the want of published programmes or reports. Many other schools, both private and in connexion with public societies or boards, administer this kind of instruction;—such, for instance, as those under the government of the Incorporated Society, mentioned in terms of high commendation by the Endowed Schools Commissioners, but the statistics of which we are precluded from giving, owing to the want of reports indicating the number of pupils following the "higher primary" courses.

Distribution of Pupils in Schools and Colleges.

From the foregoing Table it will be seen, that of the 436,873 pupils returned upon Form L, as receiving instruction at schools and colleges during the week ended April 13th, 1861, as many as 414,516 belonged to Primary Schools; 20,819 to Superior Schools; and 1,538 to Universities or Colleges. Of the 414,516 pupils attending Primary Schools, 277,522 belonged to Schools in connexion with the National Board; 46,055 to Church Education Society and Parochial Schools; 23,271 to the Schools of the Christian Brothers or other Roman Catholic Societies, not in connexion with the National Board; 25,248 to Primary

EDUCATION.

Classification of Schools.

L No. 2; Table XXVII., given below, is founded upon the returns to Form L, for the week which ended the 13th of April, 1861, and shows the denominations which we have adopted for the several classes of schools, and the numbers under instruction in each. This Table includes those of the population under as well as over the assumed school age, and will, therefore, be valuable to statisticians, who have assigned different limits to the "school age." In Table XXVIII., on the following pages, will be found the educational establishments of Ireland divided into three main groups, called respectively, primary, superior, and collegiate, upon the principle already stated. The "primary schools" are greatly subdivided, because no other group is under the government of so many distinct societies. We have not thought it necessary to subdivide the class of superior schools in Table XXVII., but we do so in Table XXVIII., founded upon the Returns for the 17th day of May, 1861, which gives the numbers of schools, with the pupils belonging to each group, and to the subdivisions of each. A corresponding Table in Part IV. upon Religion and Education refers, by foot notes, each of the more important schools to the board, society, or other government, with which it is connected.

Distribution of pupils in Schools and Colleges.

Schools under other Societies or Boards; 797 to Orphanages; and 41,623 to Private Schools. Distributed according to ages, the total number of pupils shows 20,115 under 5 years; 382,626 between 5 and 15; and 34,132 aged 15 years and upwards. The number of persons, 5 and under 15 years of age, under instruction at schools and colleges was 31·7 per cent. of the population of same age, and the percentage of the total number under instruction to the entire population was 7·5.

The School Tables which we have now presented contain, in a developed and more accurate form, the substance of the abstract given by the Census Commissioners for 1851, at p. xxiv. of their Report upon Ages and Education, already referred to; but we found ourselves obliged to depart from the classification of schools there adopted, as owing no doubt to the imperfection of the Returns in 1851, many of the classes of schools specified in the place referred to, included others given as perfectly distinct. Thus the Church Education, Parochial and Free Schools are given as distinct Classes, whereas very many of the parochial schools belong in fact to the Church Education Society, and both classes of schools are free, although small payments are received in them from children whose parents are able to afford it. Again, nearly all the Church Education Schools are properly referable to the class of Endowed, which in the Table in question is given as distinct, not only from those just mentioned, but from the Diocesan and other schools, which are unquestionably Endowed. Lastly, the National Schools are tabulated as separate from the Workhouse Schools, whereas in 22 instances only, out of 163, are Workhouse Schools not in connexion with the National Board of Education.

The final result of our inquiries, as to the number and classification of places of instruction, and the number of pupils attending therein, at the time of taking the Census of 1861, is the following:—There were four Colleges of Universities, already more specially referred to at pages 16 and 17, and a Collegiate Institution of an university character; in which five the highest class of instruction was given to 693 students. There were eight colleges for professional education, without recourse to the universities, giving instruction to 1,161 students. There were 300 Classical Schools for males, containing 10,317 scholars, and of these schools 97, containing 4,269 scholars, were under the government of societies or boards; and 203 schools, containing 6,048 scholars, were private establishments. The Superior Female schools numbered 133, containing 4,012 scholars, of whom 155 belonged to 7 schools under societies or boards; 1,388 to 75 private establishments; and 2,469 to 51 Convent Schools, 4 of which were mixed, and were attended by 39 males. There were 296 Mixed Schools of a superior character, frequented by 7,345 pupils, of whom 2,913 were males, and 44,432 females. Sixteen of these schools, containing 471 male and 254 female pupils, were governed by societies; and 280, having 2,442 male and 4,178 female scholars, were private establishments. Some of the classical schools were of so high an order as to be well entitled to the designation of colleges, which several of them assume; but as many of them equally well entitled to the same designation are known by other names, and do not include a full professional course, we have treated them as superior schools. Lastly, there were returned to us for the 17th May, 1861, 9,428 primary schools of all kinds, frequented by 443,433 scholars, of whom 229,112 were males, and 214,321 females.

The Primary Schools were distributed as follows in relation to government or direction:—5,663 schools, having 150,471 male, and 153,691 female pupils (304,162) were in connexion with the National Board. The number of National Schools from which we received returns for the 17th May, was less by 167 than the entire number (5,830) of National Schools in operation on the 31st December, 1861, some of which, doubtless, came into operation after the date of our return. Out of the former number, 109 were Convent Schools, attended by 25,990 pupils, of whom 1,311 were males, and 24,679 females; 5 were Monastic Schools, attended by 1,415 pupils; 135 were Workhouse Schools, attended by 7,249 pupils, of whom 3,490 were males, and 3,759 females (returns were not received from six of the Workhouse Schools in connexion with the National Board); 8 were Prison Schools, attended by 137 pupils, of whom 113 were males, and 24 females; and 76 were Agricultural Schools, attended by 3,616 pupils, of whom 2,861 were males, and 755 females. All these latter belong to the class of schools called "Special" by the Commissioners of National Education, and of which there were 431 in operation on the 31st December, 1861. 1,450 were returned to us as Parochial, or as belonging to the Church Education Society, attended by 43,842 pupils, of whom 22,432 were males and 21,410 females. The Primary Schools under Christian Brothers and other Roman Catholic Communities not receiving aid from the National Board, were 131, and were attended by 25,819 scholars, of whom 17,155 were males and 8,664 females. The number of Orphanages for all Ireland was 22, containing 858 pupils, of whom 234 were males and 624 females. Lastly, the number of Private Primary Schools was 1,504, attended by 43,624 pupils, of whom 24,840 were male and 18,784 female.

Number of persons under Instruction.

The total number of schools and of scholars in Ireland must, however, be much more considerable than is represented by our Tables, either for the week ended the 13th of April, or for the 17th day of May, as will appear from a comparison between the number of schools from which no return was received upon Form L, and that for which no return was made to Form L, No. 2. The number of schools making no return for the week ended April 13th on Form L, but which did make returns for the 17th of May on L, No. 2, was 548, with an attendance of 21,685 pupils. Were it not, therefore, for the use of Form L, No. 2, the number of schools and of scholars stated would have been lost to our statistics. On the other hand, 410 schools, with an attendance of 14,422 scholars, which did furnish returns for the week ended 13th April, omitted to do so for the 17th May; so that, assuming the attendance to have been the same on the last-named day as during the week referred to in April, the returns for the 17th May, although showing an increase of 138 schools and of 7,263 pupils, would, nevertheless, if taken to represent the actual number of schools and pupils in Ireland, be erroneous to the extent of 410 schools and 14,422 pupils. Adding, therefore, these numbers to the result of Table XXVIII. formed upon the L, No. 2 returns, we should have for the general total, founded upon both sets of returns, 10,580 places of instruction, attended by 481,240 pupils, or 83 in every 1,000 of the entire population.

We shall have again to present some of the foregoing Tables, in a modified shape, when we come to treat of education in connexion with the subject of religion, in the Report upon that important item in the present Census inquiries. We reserve until then such further comments and calculations as occur to us upon the subject of education in Ireland.

Irish-speaking Population.

Upon "Form A" provision similar to that in 1851, was made for ascertaining the number of the Irish-speaking population, distinguishing those who spoke Irish only from those who spoke both Irish and English. The result of that inquiry is embodied in Table XXIX. on the opposite page.

Irish-speaking Population.

From the foregoing table it will be seen that the proportion of those who speak Irish to the general population has declined since 1851, from 23·3 to 19·1 per cent.; the total number of persons speaking the Irish language having been 1,524,286 in 1851, and 1,105,536 in 1861, showing the falling off to be 418,750. Of the Irish-speaking population in 1861, 163,275 persons, or 2·8 per cent. of the entire population, spoke Irish only; and the number who spoke Irish and English was 942,261, or 16·3 per cent. of the entire population. As in 1851, the province of Connaught shows the largest per centage, 44·9; while the province of Munster exhibits the largest actual number, 545,531, and the second largest per centage (36·3) of Irish-speaking inhabitants. In the former of these provinces the decline was 5·9 per cent., and in the latter 7·6 per cent. The provinces of Ulster and Leinster hold, as in 1851, the third and fourth rank respectively, in the percentage of their Irish-speaking population; the one with 6·0, and the other with 2·5 per cent. The reduction in the percentage for each of these provinces is slight, being ·8 for Ulster and 1·0 for Leinster. In 1861, as in 1851, the counties of Galway and Mayo show the largest amount of Irish-speaking inhabitants, both as regards actual numbers and proportion to the population; the percentage being, in 1861, 62·1 for the former and 61·4 for the latter; the county of Kerry comes third in 1861, with 57·0 per cent.; Cork, West Riding, fourth, with 53·1 per cent.; Waterford county, fifth, with 52·1 per cent.; and the county of Clare, sixth, with 47·6 per cent. These six counties had in 1851 also the highest percentage of Irish-speaking population, but varied slightly from the order just given. The smallest percentage, ·1, is in the Queen's County and county of the Town of Carrickfergus. The only localities showing an increase are those of Donegal, 30·0 in 1861, as against 28·7 in 1851; Kilkenny City, 3·5 as against 3·0 in 1851; Kildare, ·6 as against ·5 in 1851; and Wicklow, ·2 as against ·1 in 1851.

In concluding our Report upon the Ages and Education of the people, we are happy in being able to renew the congratulations which were offered to your Excellency by the Census Commissioners in 1851, upon the decline of ignorance throughout the country, and we venture to express a hope that at the end of the succeeding decade, a progressive decline of ignorance may again be recorded; and further, that it may be found owing, more even than at present, to the spread of instruction, and less to the continued drain of emigration than has been the case during nearly the entire of the two last decennial periods.

We have the honour to remain

Your Excellency's obedient Servants,

WILLIAM DONNELLY, Registrar-General, } Chief Commissioner.

NOTE B.—The word "Irish" to be added in this Column to the name of each person who speaks Irish but who cannot speak English; and the words "Irish and English" to the names of those who can speak both the Irish and English Languages.

I believe the foregoing to be a true Return.

————————(Signature of Head of Family), who is also requested to sign at foot of the third Table.

Census Office, Dublin, 1861.

It is earnestly requested that the Heads of Families will see that the Answers to the several Queries contained in these Tables are distinctly and correctly given, since upon the accuracy of the answers the value of the Census must mainly depend. The information will be published in GENERAL ABSTRACTS, only, and strict care taken that the Returns are not used for the gratification of curiosity, or any other object than perfecting the Census.

The Enumerator, on receiving the Returns, is on no account to permit them to be inspected by any person, except the Officer of the District, to whom he is instructed to deliver them without delay, in order that they may be transmitted to the Census Office. The Returns will, of course, be considered by the Officer as strictly confidential.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR FILLING THESE TABLES.

The Enumerator will call for this Return as soon as possible after the night of the 7th of April, when he will assist such persons as may not be able to fill it themselves. But when competent, it is requested that the Head of the Family shall fill, or cause it to be filled, immediately after the said night, in order that the Enumerator may not be delayed when he calls for it.

This Return is divided into Three Tables.

THE 1ST TABLE is for those persons of each Family, the Visitors, and Servants, who slept or abode in the same house on the night of Sunday, the 7th of April.

By a "Family" is meant either one person living on his or her own means of support, or several persons united under one head, and having a common means of support;—therefore when there are several Families in one house, the Enumerator will leave a separate Form for each.

RELIGIOUS PROFESSION.—To prevent errors, and in order that each individual may be correctly enumerated, under this head, it is particularly requested that Protestants, who are members of the United Church of England and Ireland shall describe themselves as of the "Established Church," that members of the Roman Catholic Church shall describe themselves as "Roman Catholics," and that Protestants of the Presbyterian Church shall use the word "Presbyterian" opposite to their respective names. Individuals belonging to any other Religious Denomination or Sect are requested to describe themselves by that particular name or title by which they are most generally known.

OCCUPATIONS.—In order to arrive at a correct classification of the employments of the people, attention is requested to the following observations:—

One general principle which should be kept in mind is, that each person will be best described to whose name is annexed his or her principal means of support: thus, "Landed Proprietor,"—"House Owner,"—"Fund" or "Stock Holder,"—"Annuitant," &c., will best define the more independent classes, whose principal means are derived from any of these or similar sources.

PROFESSIONS.—A person deriving his income from a profession should state its particular nature; and professional men who are occupied with other avocations, should define them. Clergymen of every religious denomination should be described according to their Rank and Station; Barristers and Attorneys, whether they practise; Medical Men, what branch of the profession they follow; Military and Naval Officers, retired from the service, should give their rank, also adding the terms "Retired Officer;" Artists to mention the particular Art which they pursue.

Merchants should state the particular trade in which they are engaged, and Shopkeepers are to observe the same rule. In reference to writing Clerks, it is desirable that the description should show the nature of the office, as "Clerk in Public Office,"—"Law Clerk,"—"Clerk in Corn Merchant's Office," &c.

Manufacturers, Tradesmen, and Apprentices.—The particular branch of Manufacture with which each is connected should be stated: thus, a weaver of silk should be distinguished from a weaver of any other kind of material, by describing him as a "Silk Weaver;" in a similar manner a "Woollen Weaver," a "Linen Weaver," &c. This rule is to be also observed with respect to every other trade: as "Brass Founder," or "Iron Founder,"—"House Carpenter," or "Ship Carpenter,"—"House Painter," or "Carriage Painter, &c.

Servants and Labourers employed in Agricultural Works should be distinguished from those occupied in other ways, by stating the particular kind of Work in which each individual is usually engaged, as "Ploughman;" "Farm Labourer;" "Drainage Labourer;" "Mason's Labourer;" "Railway Labourer," &c.; and in the case of Household Servants, by giving their particular occupations.

EDUCATION.—In addition to the elementary acquirements in the English Language asked for under this head, information is also sought for with regard to the Irish Language, in order to ascertain the localities where, and the number of persons by whom, it is now spoken.

DEAF AND DUMB, OR BLIND.—Particular inquiry is made as to the number and condition of the Deaf and Dumb, and the Blind, in the hope that public attention may be more strongly directed to the wants of the poorer classes in Ireland who are thus afflicted. Those persons only are to be returned as Blind, who are quite deprived of sight.

THE 2ND TABLE is necessary in order to ascertain the number of persons belonging to each family, whether present or absent on the night of the 7th April. The absent members, if in Ireland, will of course be accounted for in the General Enumeration for the houses where they may happen to pass that night.

THE 3RD TABLE is for a Return of those persons who have Died while residing with this Family, during the last Ten years. The necessity for this is caused by the want of a General Registration of Deaths in Ireland, and consequently a defect of information for various objects useful to the community. This Table, however, will only show the Deaths which have occurred during the last Ten years in these families now living in Ireland.

Approved,
EDWARD CARDWELL.

WILLIAM DONNELLY,
Registrar-General.

It is particularly requested that this Return may not be soiled or in any way injured.

When the Members of a Family are too numerous for one Form, two or more will be supplied.

2ND TABLE.—RETURN of the MEMBERS of this FAMILY now Alive, and whose Home is in this House, but who were absent on the night of SUNDAY, the 7th of APRIL, 1861.

NOTE.—This Table is necessary in order to ascertain the number of persons belonging to each Family, whether present or absent on the said night.

City of Dublin.—The corrections at pages 20 and 38, for the parish of St. Paul and for Arran-quay Ward, are consequent on the omission of 105 inmates of the Military Prison at Arbour-hill, and 99 inmates of the Regimental Hospitals in the Royal Barracks; those at pages 28 and 36, for the parish of St. Bridget and for the Royal Exchange Ward, on the omission of 16 inmates of the Regimental Hospital in Ship-street Barracks; and those at pages 34 and 38, for the total of Dublin City, on the omission of the foregoing 220 persons.

Suburbs of Dublin. The corrections at page 48, for Goldenbridge Town, are consequent on the omission of 48 persons, inmates of the Regimental Hospital at Richmond Barracks; those for Portobello Town, on the omission of 20 inmates of the Regimental Hospital of Portobello Barracks; and those at page 50, for the total of the barony of Uppercross, and of the Suburbs of the City of Dublin, on the omission of the 68 persons from the Population Tables of the two foregoing localities.

County of Dublin (exclusive of the Suburbs of Dublin).—The corrections at page 58, for the parish of St. James, and of the barony of Castleknock, was caused by the omission of 185 inmates of the "General Military Hospital," situated in the Phœnix Park; those at page 62, for the parish of Santry, and for the barony of Coolock, from the omission of 70 persons residing in the "Incorporated Society's School-house" at Santry; those at page 70, for the parish of Monkstown, and at page 74, for the barony of Rathdown, from the circumstance of the 26 female children in the Loretto Convent at Dalkey, having been included with the population of the parish of Monkstown as well as with that of Dalkey; and those at pages 78 and 334, for the total of the County of Dublin (exclusive of the Suburbs of the City of Dublin), from the omission of the 185 inmates of the General Military Hospital, Phœnix Park; and the 70 persons in the School-house at Santry; and from the 26 children belonging to the Loretto Convent at Dalkey, having been twice registered.

County of Wicklow.—The corrections at page 324, for the parish of Powerscourt, and the barony of Rathdown, and at pages 333 and 340, for the county of Wicklow, are consequent on the omission of 235 persons in St. Kevin's Reformatory, Glencree.

ERRATA FOR SCHOOL TABLES.

The three following Schools have been tabulated as belonging to the "Christian Brothers and Other Roman Catholic Communities," instead of under the head of "National," as the original Returns did not indicate that they were in connexion with the National Board of Education, but upon collating these Returns with the Commissioners' Reports, it was found that they should have been classed as National Schools.
